Introduction

Writing skills are usually the most difficult skills to acquire in a language. This is particularly true in a foreign language. The goal of this book is to reduce that difficulty as it guides you through the various types of structures in the English language and illustrates how those structures combine to make sentences.

Naturally, in order to acquire writing skills you have to write. Therefore, you will be provided with an abundance of writing exercises. Some will require a small variation in a given sentence. Others will provide you with a series of words that you form into an appropriate sentence. And you will have plenty of opportunity for coming up with original sentences of your own. This development of writing better English sentences moves gradually and with careful explanation from the least complex activity to the most complex.

Make changes to given sentences.	}	Writing skills developed
Combine a series of words as a sentence.
Write original sentences.

In addition to the illustrations of how structures combine to form sentences and to the exercises for practice, an Answer Key is provided at the end of the book. It includes not only the correct answers for the exercises but also sample sentences, with which you can compare your original sentences.

Good sentence writing is not an impossible task, but it requires analysis and practice and a willingness to apply concepts and rules consistently. Let this book guide you, and you will discover a new confidence for writing more successfully in English.

Have fun and write well!

Declarative sentences and word order

•1•

Declarative sentences in English consist of a subject and predicate. The verb in the predicate is conjugated appropriately for the subject and in a specific tense:

subject + predicate

Mary + speaks English.

Let's look at some examples that illustrate this. Declarative sentences can have a singular or plural noun as their subject and can be followed by a verb in any tense and by the complement of the sentence.

John repairs the car.

The boys ran into the forest.

Other declarative sentences use a pronoun as their subject, and again the tense of the sentence can vary.

She has never been to England.

singular-pronoun subject, present-perfect-tense verb

We shall visit them soon.

plural-pronoun subject, future-tense verb

Since English verbs can show an incomplete action or one in progress (he is going) or a completed or habitual action (he goes), when changing tenses, you have to conform to the type of action of the verb. For example:

he is going, he was going, he has been going

he goes, he went, he has gone

The conjugation of English verbs is, with few exceptions, a relatively simple matter, but using the proper tenses of verbs is something else. It is particularly important to understand the tense differences between verbs that describe an action in progress and verbs that describe a completed or habitual action.

Incomplete actions

Let's look at some sentences that illustrate the meaning of incomplete actions—or ones in progress—in the present, past, and future tenses. Note that in some cases, it is an interruption of some kind that causes the action to be incomplete. (To the right of the examples are italicized clarifications that will help you fully understand the example sentences.)

Present tense

He is washing the car.

We are building a tree house.

He has not finished. The car still has some dirty spots.

The tree house is not yet finished.

Past tense

I was sleeping when he called.

The men were working in the mine but suddenly quit.

I didn't finish my nap. His call interrupted my sleep.

The work in the mine is unfinished, because the men quit.

Future tense

He will be playing in a rock band.
Sarah will be needing more money.

*There is no apparent end to his job in the band.
There is no apparent end to Sarah's need for money.*

Completed actions

Compare those examples with the following sentences that illustrate verbs that describe completed or habitual actions:

Present tense

He washes the car every Sunday.
They live in the capital.

His habit is to wash the car on Sunday.

Their regular place of residence is the capital.

Past tense

The puppy slept with me every night.
I worked in Mexico for five years.

The puppy's habit was to sleep with me.

My work for five years was in Mexico. I work elsewhere now.

Future tense

He will play a hymn for us on the piano.
Uncle Bill will arrive today.

He is going to play the hymn just once.

Uncle Bill will arrive today only once.

The perfect tenses conform to the same kinds of meanings. For example:

Incomplete action or one in progress

He has been washing the car for three hours.

I had been sleeping in the den.

The men will have been working on it for twenty-four hours by tomorrow.

Completed or habitual action

They have lived here since June.

The pup had never slept so long before.

Uncle Bill will have arrived home by the time we get there.

Rewrite the following declarative sentences in the missing tenses.

1. a. Present _____
Past Thomas found the wallet.
b. Present perfect _____
c. Past perfect _____
d. Future _____
- 2 Present The men are trying to raze the barn.
a. Past _____
b. Present perfect _____
c. Past perfect _____
d. Future _____
3. a. Present _____
b. Past _____
c. Present perfect _____
d. Past perfect _____
Future They will drop by at two P.M.
4. a. Present _____
b. Past _____
Present perfect She has been working here as a counselor.
c. Past perfect _____
d. Future _____
5. Present I have no time.
a. Past _____
b. Present perfect _____
c. Past perfect _____
d. Future _____

Change the following sentences from actions in progress to completed or habitual actions. Add or remove words as needed to make sense. Keep the same tense as the original sentence.

EXAMPLE: Bill is still eating his breakfast.
Bill eats his breakfast at seven thirty A.M.

1. The attorneys were drawing up the contracts for the merger.

2. I will probably still be cooking when you arrive.

3. The boys will be sleeping in the little room in the attic.

4. I have been hoping for a long time to have a visit from you.

5. They had been sitting on the porch when the storm came up.

Follow the same directions, but change from completed or habitual actions to actions in progress.

6. We shall work even harder.

7. They traveled to Greece this year.

8. She cried when he left.

9. Bill and I often play catch in the backyard.

10. I hope the two boys will finally pass the test.

Recognizing tense from context

With certain verbs, it is the context of the sentence that tells you which tense is implied, because these verbs are identical, except for the third-person singular, in both the present and past tenses. Six such verbs are cut, put, let, set, quit, and read. Let's look at one of these verbs (cut) and how it is conjugated in the present and past tenses.

Present	I cut, you cut, he cuts, we cut, you cut, they cut
Past	I cut, you cut, he cut, we cut, you cut, they cut

As you can clearly see, it is only in the third-person-singular present tense (he cuts) where there is any difference between the present-tense and past-tense conjugations. Therefore, in order to know which tense is being used in a sentence, you must consider the context of the sentence. (Naturally, in the case of the verb read, there is a difference in the pronunciation of the two tenses. It is in their written form where the distinction must be made.)

Certain adverbs act as signals that tell whether these verbs are being used in the present or past tense, adverbs such as today, yesterday, and tomorrow. Remember that an English present tense can indicate the future tense; therefore, tomorrow is an appropriate signal for distinguishing the tense of these verbs. For example:

Present	He quits working here today .
Past	He quit yesterday after only five days on the job.
Future	He quits tomorrow after more than thirty years with us.

Let's look at some examples, in which the subject is not a third-person singular. Also keep in mind that other adverbial phrases and expressions can indicate the past or the future; for example: last year or next week. Other verbs in a sentence also signal the tense.

Present-tense verb as a tense signal

You are careless and always let the dog run away.
I get the dishes and set the table.
I find the right paragraph and read in a loud voice.

Past-tense verb or adverbial expression as a tense signal

He quit school when still a teenager.
The bread is stale because I cut it two days ago.
She opened the book and put on her glasses.

When these verbs describe an action in progress or are used with an auxiliary, there is no difficulty in determining the tense of the sentence. For example:

They were reading the newspaper.	past
The sun is setting .	present
I won't let this happen again!	future

Exercise

1.3

In the space provided, write the tense of the sentence: present, past, or future.

- _____ She lets me borrow her notebook.
- _____ I read that novel back in high school.
- _____ The toddler cut his finger again.
- _____ The explorers set out on another journey last month.
- _____ She was putting on her dress when she fell.
- _____ My brother quits a new job every few weeks.

7. _____ No one read the article.
8. _____ The judge put the thief in jail again.
9. _____ Tomorrow I quit for sure!
10. _____ We won't set foot in this restaurant ever again!

There are several other verbs that are identical in the present and past tenses. They are as follows:

beat	hit	split
bet	hurt	spread
burst	rid	thrust
cast	slit	wet
cost	shed

Types of complements

The complement of a declarative sentence can be an adjective, an adverb, a prepositional phrase, an object, or a combination of these elements.

subject + predicate + adjective/adverb/prepositional phrase/object

Consider these examples with an adjective and an adverb:

The children were noisy .	adjective
His eyes blinked rapidly .	adverb

The following examples illustrate a prepositional phrase and a direct object:

Our relatives sat in the garden .	prepositional phrase
I don't know Mr. Walker .	direct object

The following example illustrates a combination of those elements.

They approached the house cautiously from the rear .	combination of elements
---	--------------------------------

Exercise

1.4

Using the verbs provided as cues, write original sentences in the tenses specified.

EXAMPLE:

buy / present habitual

He buys something new every day.

1. apply / present completed or habitual

2. suggest / present in progress or incomplete

3. annoy / present perfect in progress or incomplete

4. remain / future completed or habitual

5. attempt / past in progress or incomplete

6. trick / present perfect completed or habitual

7. rub / past completed or habitual

8. earn / future in progress or incomplete

9. harvest / past perfect completed or habitual

10. lend / present perfect in progress or incomplete

Exercise

Complete the following sentences twice with the type of complement specified.

EXAMPLE:

adverb or adverbial phrase

The men had to work slowly.

The men had to work every day.

1. adverb or adverbial phrase

a. Tina wrote him _____

b. Tina wrote him _____

2. prepositional phrase

a. James chatted _____

b. James chatted _____

3. direct object

a. Dad wanted to sell _____

b. Dad wanted to sell _____

4. direct and indirect object

a. Bob sent _____

b. Bob sent _____

5. adjective

a. She was always _____

b. She was always _____

6. combination of elements

a. Mary drove _____

b. Mary drove _____

7. adverb or adverbial phrase

a. She was practicing _____

b. She was practicing _____

8. prepositional phrase

a. I met him _____

b. I met him _____

9. direct and indirect object

a. I will give _____

b. I will give _____

10. combination of elements

a. The soldiers ran _____

b. The soldiers ran _____

Placing emphasized elements first

In order to emphasize a specific element (such as an adverb or prepositional phrase) in a declarative sentence, it is possible to place that element ahead of the subject. The positions of the other elements of the sentence (subject, verb, predicate) do not change.

emphasized element + subject + predicate + complement

Emphasized elements tend to tell when or how often something is done (usually, ordinarily, in the winter, today, during summer vacation). For example:

They went to a concert yesterday.	=	Yesterday they went to a concert.
He brushes his teeth every morning.	=	Every morning he brushes his teeth.
The girls play chess in the evening.	=	In the evening the girls play chess.

If a long prepositional phrase is the first element of a sentence, it is common to separate it from the rest of the sentence by a comma. For example:

Without looking back at his parents, John quickened his pace and turned the corner.
After hearing the good news, Mary embraced Bill and kissed him.

Commas can also be used to separate a highly emphasized adverb from the rest of the sentence:

Truthfully, I really never saw the accident happen.

Exercise

1.6

Begin each sentence that follows with four different adverbs or prepositional phrases.

EXAMPLE:

Today she finally felt well again.

After a long illness, she finally felt well again.

Incredibly, she finally felt well again.

Happily, she finally felt well again.

1. a. _____ Granddad arrived soaking wet.
b. _____ Granddad arrived soaking wet.
c. _____ Granddad arrived soaking wet.
d. _____ Granddad arrived soaking wet.
2. a. _____ I spent too much money.
b. _____ I spent too much money.
c. _____ I spent too much money.
d. _____ I spent too much money.
3. a. _____ his son had learned a serious lesson.
b. _____ his son had learned a serious lesson.
c. _____ his son had learned a serious lesson.
d. _____ his son had learned a serious lesson.
4. a. _____ we will go sightseeing in Madrid.
b. _____ we will go sightseeing in Madrid.
c. _____ we will go sightseeing in Madrid.
d. _____ we will go sightseeing in Madrid.
5. a. _____ their village was completely destroyed.
b. _____ their village was completely destroyed.
c. _____ their village was completely destroyed.
d. _____ their village was completely destroyed.

Using negatives

Declarative sentences do not have to make positive statements. They can be negated by using any of a variety of negative words: no, not, not any, none, nothing, no one, never, nowhere, or nobody. Let's look at an example with each of these negative words:

I have no time for this now.
You are not allowed to smoke here.
She does not want any contact with you.
None of the contestants knew the answer.
I have nothing more to say to you.
He spoke to no one about it.
They never really expected to win the lottery.
There's nowhere I'd rather live than right here.
Nobody saw the burglar enter the house.

Except with the verb to be, a form of do is used when negating a verb with not. The object of the verb will be preceded by a form of any. If a form of no is used as the negative, do is not required. Compare the following sentences:

I want no money from you.	=	I don't want any money from you.
Tom has no time.	=	Tom does not have any time.
There is no one here to help me.	=	There isn't anyone here to help me.

The forms of no and any are as follows:

no	not any
no one	not anyone
nobody	not anybody
nowhere	not anywhere
nothing	not anything

A form of no or a form of not any can be used to replace one another.

a form of no = a form of do not + a form of any

I have no money.	=	I do not have any money.
-------------------------	---	--

A form of do is used only with the negation of verbs in the present and past tenses. With modal auxiliaries or auxiliaries of the perfect and future tenses, avoid do.

She could do no better.	=	She couldn't do any better.
The boy has caused no problems.	=	The boy hasn't caused any problems.
Mr. Cole will accept no excuses.	=	Mr. Cole won't accept any excuses.

auxiliary with a form of no = auxiliary with not + a form of any

I will buy no gifts.	=	I will not buy any gifts.
-----------------------------	---	----------------------------------

Rewrite each sentence with a form of not any. Retain the tense of the original sentence.

EXAMPLE: The teacher found no errors.
 The teacher didn't find any errors.

1. John could take no one's advice.

2. I will accept nothing but excellence.

3. There is nowhere for you to hide.

4. Ms. Brooks spoke with nobody about the problem.

5. You should give no one so young that kind of responsibility.

6. That will take no time at all.

7. There is nothing else that I want to say.

8. There was no one for him to turn to.

9. My parents had found no place to spend the night.

10. They will achieve nothing from their efforts.

Interrogative sentences

There are two types of interrogative sentences, and both types ask questions. The first type can be called a yes-no question, because the answer to such a question will begin with the affirmative word yes or the negative word no. Most questions of this type begin with a form of the auxiliary verb do.

auxiliary + subject + verb + predicate +?

Do + you + have + the books +?

Yes-no questions

If the verb in a yes-no question is the verb to be or the verb to have, the question is formed simply by placing the verb before the subject of the sentence.

to be/to have + subject + predicate +?

Is + she + the new student +?

This occurs in any tense. In the case of the perfect tenses or the future tense, it is the auxiliary of the verbs to be and to have that precede the subject. For example:

Present	Is she aware of the problem?
Past	Was there enough time to finish the exam?
Present perfect	Have you been here before?
Future	Will Professor Burns be today's lecturer again?
Present	Have you enough money for the tickets?
Past	Had he adequate notice?
Present perfect	Has your mother had the operation yet?
Future	Will the workers have some time off?

Auxiliaries

This kind of question structure, in which the verb precedes the subject, also occurs with numerous auxiliaries, such as the following:

be able to	ought to
can	shall/will could	should have	would must auxiliary + subject + verb form + predicate +?

Should + we + help + them +?

Let's look at some example sentences:

Are you able to make out her signature?

Have you worked here for very long?

Ought she to have said that to her mother?

Notice in each example that the sentence contains a second verb. The initial verb is an auxiliary, and it is followed by an infinitive (such as to work) or by an elliptical infinitive, which omits the particle word (to); for example: are you able to make, will you try. With most auxiliaries, it is the tense of the auxiliary that determines the "time" of the action; for example: present (can he speak) and past (could he speak).

With the auxiliary have, however, its tense conjugation combined with a past participle (and not an infinitive) identifies the tense as either present perfect, past perfect, or future perfect:

Present perfect	has he spoken
Past perfect	had he spoken
Future perfect	will he have spoken

The auxiliaries shall and will identify the future tense and are followed by elliptical infinitives:

Shall I get you something for dinner?

Will you be staying the night?

In declarative sentences, most English speakers use will, although technically, shall should be used with singular and plural pronouns in the first person, and will should be used with the second and third persons. In questions, the rule is applied more strictly: shall with first-person singular and plural, and will with second- and third-persons singular and plural.

	Singular	Plural
First	Shall I turn on the TV?	Shall we go to the movies tonight?
Second	Tom, will you help me with this?	Boys, will you please stop your arguing?
Third	Will she like this dress?	Will they be able to spend some time with us?

It is important to be knowledgeable about the other auxiliaries and how they function in the various tenses. Let's focus on two that can be conjugated like other verbs and form questions by placing the conjugated verb or its auxiliaries before the subject:

Present	Is she able to stand alone?
Past	Was she able to stand alone?
Present perfect	Has she been able to stand alone?
Future	Will she be able to stand alone?
Present	Have you a few extra dollars?
Past	Had you a few extra dollars?
Present perfect	Have you had a few extra dollars?
Future	Will you have a few extra dollars?

Compare to be able to and have with the following auxiliaries and what occurs with them in the various tenses:

◆ Can changes to to be able to Present

Past
Present perfect
Future

Can Victor understand the problem?
Could Victor understand the problem?
Has Victor been able to understand the problem?
Will Victor be able to understand the problem?

◆ Ought to changes to ought to have

Present
Past
Present perfect
Future

Ought you to speak so harshly?
Ought to is not used in a past-tense question.*
Ought you to have spoken so harshly?
Ought to is not used in a future-tense question.*

◆ Must changes to have to

Present
Past
Present perfect
Future

Must he live alone?
Did he have to live alone?
Has he had to live alone?
Will he have to live alone?

◆ Should changes to should have

Present
Past
Present perfect
Future

Should they argue so much?
Should is not used in a past-tense question.*
Should they have argued so much?
Should is not used in a future-tense question.*

Questions with do/did

Verbs that are not auxiliaries form questions by beginning them in the present tense with do and in the past tense with did. The use of do/did does not occur in the other tenses. Let's examine a few cases in point:

Present
Past
Present perfect
Future

Do you enjoy her classes?
Did you enjoy her classes?
Have you enjoyed her classes?
Will you enjoy her classes?

Present
Past
Present perfect
Future

Does Thomas visit you often?
Did Thomas visit you often?
Has Thomas visited you often?
Will Thomas visit you often?

Since have is an auxiliary, it can be used in questions without do/did. Nevertheless, there is a tendency to add the extra do/did auxiliary both in speech and in writing.

Present
Past
Present perfect
Future

Do you have a few extra dollars?
Did you have a few extra dollars?
Have you had a few extra dollars?
Will you have a few extra dollars?

When using have to (which is much the same as must in meaning), you must use do/did in the present and past tenses.

Present
Past
Present perfect
Future

Do they have to work so many hours?
Did they have to work so many hours?
Have they had to work so many hours?
Will they have to work so many hours?

The auxiliaries to want to and to like to form their present- and past-tense questions with do/did. For example:

Present
Past
Present perfect
Future

Does Mom want to go shopping?
Did Mom want to go shopping?
Has Mom wanted to go shopping?
Will Mom want to go shopping?

Present
Past
Present perfect
Future

Do they like to listen to rap music?
Did they like to listen to rap music?
Have they liked to listen to rap music?
Will they like to listen to rap music?

You should be aware that while both to want to and to like to are auxiliary verbs, they are also used as transitive verbs, taking a direct object. When they are used as transitive verbs, the final to is omitted from the verb: to want and to like. Even when used as transitive verbs, they form their present- and past-tense questions with do/did.

do/did + subject + want/like + predicate +?

Does + she + like + him +?

Present Do you want some help?

Past

Does she like pizza?
Did you want some help?
Did she like pizza?

Exercise

2.1

Rewrite the following questions in the missing tenses.

1. a. Present _____
b. Past _____
c. Present perfect _____
Future Will you be home for the holidays?
2. a. Present _____
Past Did the arsonist burn down the bank?
b. Present perfect _____
c. Future _____
3. a. Present _____
b. Past _____
Present perfect Have you had to spend a lot of time studying?
c. Future _____

4. a. Present _____

b. Past _____

Present perfect Have the workers done the job right?

c. Future _____

5. Present Can you really predict the outcome of the election?

a. Past _____

b. Present perfect _____

c. Future _____

2·2

Write original questions with the following auxiliaries in the tense shown in parentheses.

EXAMPLE: can (past) Could you see over the tall hedge?

1. should (present perfect) _____

2. must (present) _____

3. want to (future) _____

4. have to (present) _____

5. have (future) _____

6. be able to (present) _____

7. will (future) _____

8. ought to (present perfect) _____

9. would (present) _____

10. must (present perfect) _____

Exercise

2·3

Using the phrases provided, first form a yes-no question. Then change the question by adding any appropriate auxiliary.

EXAMPLE: to walk to work

Do you always walk to work?

Do you always have to walk to work?

1. to spend more than a hundred dollars

a. _____

b. _____

2. to arrive in the capital on time

a. _____

b. _____

3. to develop a new method

a. _____

b. _____

4. to remain calm

Progressive-form questions

Just as in a declarative sentence, verbs in a question can be formed in the progressive, which means that they are actions in progress or incomplete. Since the progressive form is composed of a conjugation of to be plus a present participle (is going, was singing), and to be never forms a question with do/did, all questions that have a progressive verb will begin with the verb to be or its auxiliaries.

to be + subject + present participle (-ing) +?

Are + you + working in the garden +?

For example:

Present

Past

Present perfect

Future

Are you planning on attending the party?

Was she sleeping when the storm hit?

Have the men been working in the mine again?

Will he be preparing for final exams?

Be aware that a verb in a do/did question will not require the auxiliary do/did when it is changed to its progressive form. For example:

Do you attend a state university?

Are you attending a state university?

Did the campers sleep in tents?

Were the campers sleeping in tents?

Exercise

2.4

Change each of the following sentences to a question. Then, in a second question, change the verb to the progressive form. Be sure to retain the tense of the original sentence.

EXAMPLE:

Bill learned shorthand.

Did Bill learn shorthand?

Was Bill learning shorthand?

1. A plumber fixed the leaking pipes.

a. _____

b. _____

2. You couldn't work on that old car.

a. _____

b. _____

3. The judges have spoken about this for a long time.

a. _____

b. _____

4. Time goes by very fast.

a. _____

b. _____

5. Thunder rolled across the foothills.

a. _____

b. _____

6. You will take a series of exams.

a. _____

b. _____

7. Mr. Kelly has wanted to vacation there.

a. _____

b. _____

8. He's crazy.

a. _____

b. _____

9. The revelers have had a good time at the celebration.

a. _____

b. _____

10. I should sit nearer to her.

a. _____

b. _____

Questions using interrogative words

The second kind of question formation is one that begins with an interrogative word: who, what, why, how, which, or when. The rules that apply about the use of do/did in questions apply in the same way with questions that begin with an interrogative word. For example:

Can he understand you?
Do you like that man?
Are you coming to the party?
Have you found the books?

How can he understand you?
Why do you like that man?
When are you coming to the party?
Where have you found the books?

As you can see from these examples, yes-no questions and questions that begin with an interrogative word can be, for the most part, identical. Likewise, the choice of do/did in a question is the same in either type of question. This is possible because the interrogatives illustrated in the four examples are substitutes for adverbs, and since adverbs only modify, changes are not always needed in a question.

This is not the case, however, with who and what. These two interrogatives are actually pronouns that stand in place of a subject or an object in a sentence. In the following examples, an arrow (→) points out how a declarative sentence is changed to an interrogative sentence with who or what. For example:

Subject	The man is sick.	→	Who is sick?
Subject	A box is needed.	→	What is needed?
Object	They met the woman.	→	Whom did they meet?
Object	She broke the lamp.	→	What did she break?
Object	I spoke with him.	→	With whom did I speak?
Object	The boy sat on it.	→	On what did the boy sit?

In less formal style, who is often substituted for whom. This occurs even in writing, although in formal writing the appropriate use of whom should be applied.

Also, the placing of a preposition in front of whom or what is formal in style. In a less formal version, prepositions are placed at the end of the question and would look like this:

Who did you speak with?
What did the boy sit on?

If a possessive of who or what is required, use whose or of what.

I spoke with Tom's father.	With whose father did you speak?
The color of the book is red.	Whose color is red? (The color of what is red?)

Exercise

2.5

Use the underlined cue provided to determine which interrogative word applies; then write the appropriate question for the sentence.

EXAMPLE: John is a fantastic soccer player.
Who is a fantastic soccer player?

- The attendant closed and locked the gates at seven sharp.

- They leave for Puerto Rico at the beginning of every February.

- Life isn't always easy to understand.

- Ms. Perez's two puppies got their shots today.

- They probably caught the flu from the boy who coughed through the lecture.

- We plan on getting to the match on the subway.

7. That big bully threw the ball on the other side of the fence.

8. The girls should come home right after the end of the movie.

9. Andrea has a crush on the blond boy.

10. They know about the change in plans, because they received a fax from him today.

Exercise

2·6

Write original sentences with the interrogatives provided.

1. why _____
2. how _____
3. whom _____
4. which _____
5. when _____

The interrogative how is often combined with other words to form new interrogatives. Just some of these are how much, how many, how often, how old, how long, and how tall. In sentences, they are used like this:

How much does that magazine cost?

How often do the girls work out?

How long did you have to wait to see the doctor?

How tall is the center on the basketball team?

Exercise

2·7

Form original questions with how by combining it with the cues provided. Then give an appropriate answer to the question.

EXAMPLE: many How many players are there on a football team?
 There are eleven players on a football team.

1. little

- a. _____
- b. _____

2. large

a. _____

b. _____

3. frequently

a. _____

b. _____

4. difficult

a. _____

b. _____

5. hot

a. _____

b. _____

6. strong

a. _____

b. _____

7. often

a. _____

b. _____

Questions and answers

•3•

In the previous chapter, you dealt with the types of questions that exist and how they are formed in the various tenses and with various auxiliaries. In this chapter, you will analyze the various elements of sentences to determine what kind of question is required by those elements.

Questions about all the information in a sentence

For starters, if you ask a question about an entire sentence and are not seeking specific information about a part of that sentence, you will ask a yes-no question.

entire sentence → yes-no question

Let us assume that you wish to ask about all the information in the following sentence:

John is the brother-in-law of the new mayor.

The question for this complete sentence is a yes-no question:

Is John the brother-in-law of the new mayor?

The possible answers are as follows:

Yes, John is the brother-in-law of the new mayor.

No, John isn't the brother-in-law of the new mayor.

Let's look at a couple more examples of questions that inquire into all the information in a sentence:

The new cruise ship will be one of the largest in the world.

→ Will the new cruise ship be one of the largest in the world?

→ Yes, the new cruise ship will be one of the largest in the world.

or No, the new cruise ship won't be one of the largest in the world.

My daughter had a baby last month.

→ Did your daughter have a baby last month?

→ Yes, my daughter had a baby last month.

or No, my daughter didn't have a baby last month.

Write a yes-no question for each of the following statements. Retain the tense of the original statement. Then answer each question once with yes and once with no. Following the no response, provide an original positive response.

EXAMPLE:

She spoke with him yesterday.

Did she speak with him yesterday?

Yes, she spoke with him yesterday.

No, she didn't speak with him yesterday. She spoke with him today.

1. The conductor of the orchestra studied music in New York.

a. _____

b. _____

c. _____

2. The discovery of the New World changed the world forever.

a. _____

b. _____

c. _____

3. There are numerous species of birds of prey in this region.

a. _____

b. _____

c. _____

4. The hatchlings suffered during the cold weather.

a. _____

b. _____

c. _____

5. My cousin in Cleveland won the lottery.

a. _____

b. _____

c. _____

6. The performance is supposed to start at eight P.M.

a. _____

b. _____

c. _____

7. The operation was a total success.

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

8. Mr. Keller's niece has great artistic ability.

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

9. Outdoor concerts are given on Mondays and Fridays.

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

10. The toddler fell asleep on the floor.

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

Questions about specific parts of a sentence

When you seek information about only a portion of a sentence, you should not use a yes-no question. Instead, an interrogative word is used that identifies the part of the sentence about which you are inquiring.

question about a specific part of a sentence → interrogative word

Take note that nearly every element in a sentence can be the object of a question posed by an interrogative word. Let's look at how many questions can be derived from the following single sentence:

Andrew Jackson came to fame after his victory at the battle of New Orleans.

Here are some possible questions:

- Who came to fame after his victory at the battle of New Orleans?
- What happened to Andrew Jackson after his victory at the battle of New Orleans?
- When did Andrew Jackson come to fame?
- Why did Andrew Jackson come to fame?
- In what city did Andrew Jackson come to fame after his victory there?
- At what battle did Andrew Jackson come to fame?
- After what event did Andrew Jackson come to fame?

And of course, a yes-no question can be asked about the information in the entire sentence:

Did Andrew Jackson come to fame after his victory at the battle of New Orleans?

Placing prepositions in an interrogative phrase

When you ask a question about the information in a prepositional phrase, the preposition must be included in the question. Its position in the question varies and is dependent on the tone of the question: is it formal or informal? In writing, the formal form tends to be preferred. Let's look at some prepositional phrases and how they are formed in questions:

Prepositional phrase	Interrogative
It was hidden in a box .	In what was it hidden?	formal
	What was it hidden in?	informal
The letters were from him .	From whom were the letters?	formal
	Who were the letters from?	informal
They spoke about the war .	About what did they speak?	formal
	What did they speak about?	informal
The dog waits for the boy .	For whom does the dog wait?	formal
	Who does the dog wait for?	informal

When a prepositional phrase indicates a location or a destination, the interrogative where can usually replace a preposition and an interrogative. For example:

Prepositional phrase	Interrogative
They hid in the barn .	In what did they hide? What did they hide in? Where did they hide?
The cat slept under the sofa .	Under what did the cat sleep? What did the cat sleep under? Where did the cat sleep?
I traveled to Venice .	To what city did you travel? What city did you travel to? Where did you travel?

It is most common to use where in questions that inquire into location or destination, but a preposition and an interrogative can be used if you want to be precise or specific.

If someone is returning from a place, where and from are used to form the question.

He just got back from Iraq.	Where did he just get back from ?
Mom returned from the store.	Where did Mom return from ?

Write a separate question for each of the underlined elements in the following sentences.

EXAMPLE: The old house was covered in vines.
What was covered in vines?
In what was the old house covered?

1. The men from the home office arrived in time for the dedication.

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

2. The old bull became enraged and charged the unsuspecting visitors.

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

3. In the winter of 2008, several tourists lost their way in a dangerous blizzard.

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

4. The defendant was berated mercilessly by the angry judge.

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

5. The eager hunter bought some shells before heading out to the duck blind.

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

Combine each set of words into an appropriate sentence. Then ask a question about two elements in that sentence.

EXAMPLE:

toys / lie / middle / floor

The child's toys were lying in the middle of the floor.

Whose toys were lying in the middle of the floor?

Where were the child's toys lying?

1. woman / think / about / problems / with / neighbors

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

2. I / jump / river / swim / opposite shore

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

3. no one / suspect / men / crimes / another state

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

4. children / songs / dances / delight / guests

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

5. nocturnal animal / prey / rabbit / mouse

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

Answer each of the following questions with a sentence containing an appropriate prepositional phrase or adverb.

1. On what day of the week is the new restaurant closed?

2. The price of what is going to be more than a hundred dollars?

3. What was the treasure buried in?

4. With whom did Ms. Burns have that horrible argument?

5. What time do you want to leave for the game?

6. About what was the lecturer speaking?

7. Where do you want to go on vacation next year?

8. Who can you rely on in times like this?

9. When do you plan on leaving for work?

10. Whose house did the children have to live at?

Using the word or phrase provided, write a declarative sentence. Then ask a question that can be answered with the cue word or phrase.

EXAMPLE:

at night

The boys rarely went out at night.

When did the boys rarely go out?

1. recently

a. _____

b. _____

2. during summer vacation

a. _____

b. _____

3. to New England

a. _____

b. _____

4. in the Colorado Rockies

a. _____

b. _____

5. near Lake Michigan

a. _____

b. _____

6. Mr. Newman's

a. _____

b. _____

7. seldom

a. _____

b. _____

8. as tall as a tree

a. _____

b. _____

9. while visiting Canada

a. _____

b. _____

10. extremely beautiful

a. _____

b. _____

Exercise

3•6

Answer the following questions in any appropriate way. Include the cue word or phrase provided in parentheses.

EXAMPLE:

Who left for work at seven A.M.? (older)

My older brother left for work at seven A.M. as usual.

1. When can you have this project completed? (schedule)

2. Is there really any difference between their two plans? (at the very least)

3. Whose dissertation was rejected? (incompetent)

4. What is the length of the course for this year's marathon? (obstacles)

5. During what war did the Battle of the Bulge take place? (unexpected)

6. What became of the young woman who wrote this beautiful letter? (in a terrible storm)

7. Why does the boss always contradict me? (perfect)

8. Where should we go for lunch today? (in the mood)

9. Why don't you believe me? (lies and half-truths)

10. Have you been involved with this person for a long time? (trust)

Imperatives

Imperatives, or commands, are as important in good sentence writing as any other grammatical element. It is essential to differentiate among the various types of imperatives in order to use them appropriately and effectively.

You as the subject of an imperative

Most imperatives are made to the second-person singular or plural (you), although the pronoun is not stated.

imperative form of a verb + predicate → command

Certain gruff or impolite-sounding imperatives cannot be used in every situation. Some of these are said in a casual manner, while others are said in anger or out of belligerence. For example:

Shut up!	Get out!
Be quiet!	Don't ever say that again!
Don't ever do that again!	Stop it!
Hurry up!	Leave me alone!
Shut your mouth!	Give me that!
Let go!	Beat it!

The exclamation point

Most imperatives of this nature are punctuated with an exclamation point, but imperatives can also be punctuated with a period. An exclamation point in writing is a signal that the imperative is stated with great emphasis. For example:

Stand up!	emphatic, perhaps angry in tone
Stand up.	milder but still casual and a bit gruff in tone

Other short imperatives can be written with an exclamation point when they are pleas or urgent requests. For example:

Have a heart!	Be patient!
Stand back!	Keep moving!
Don't joke about that!	Hold on tight!
Don't excite the dog!	Make some room for me!

Respond to each incident described with a gruff or angry imperative.

1. Someone approaches you menacingly and says, "I'm going to get you."

2. Someone has unlocked your diary and is reading through it.

3. Someone continues to refuse to leave your home.

4. Someone is acting foolishly and is teasing you.

5. Someone is packing a suitcase slowly although the hour of departure is near.

6. Someone is pestering you and making you annoyed.

Follow the same directions, but respond with a plea or an urgent request.

7. A child is leaning down to pet a vicious dog.

8. You're riding fast on a motorcycle and you tell your passenger to be careful.

9. You are thirsty and would like a soft drink.

10. You feel that someone should be kinder.

Please

Most imperatives are usually said with a certain amount of courtesy. The inclusion of please softens the tone of the command. Certainly, please wait here sounds nicer than wait here. Therefore, it is wise to include the word please in most commands. However, its position in a sentence and the addition or lack of a comma can change the general meaning of the sentence significantly.

If an imperative begins with please, it has the same meaning as when it ends with please.

please + imperative verb + predicate

Please + lend + me a dollar.

imperative verb + predicate + please

Lend + me a dollar +, please.

If please is written at the end of an imperative, as in the example just shown, it is preceded by a comma. Here are more examples:

Please sign here.
Please fill out this form.
Please fasten your seat belts.

Sign here, please.
Fill out this form, please.
Fasten your seat belts, please.

A comma placed after an initial please changes the courteous meaning to one that suggests impatience or exasperation. In speech, the word please would be followed by a pause before the imperative is given. In writing, the pause is indicated by a comma.

Courteous

Please keep back from the fire.
Please don't feed the animals.
Please move along quickly.

Impatient

Please, keep back from the fire.
Please, don't feed the animals.
Please, move along quickly.

If the imperative is meant to show impatience or exasperation, it can be punctuated with an exclamation point:

Please, control your temper!

Exercise

4.2

Using the cue word provided, write an imperative sentence twice, beginning it once with please and ending it once with please.

EXAMPLE:

stay

Please stay in your room.

Stay in your room, please.

1. enjoy

- a. _____
- b. _____

2. find

- a. _____
- b. _____

3. remember

- a. _____
- b. _____

4. choose

- a. _____
- b. _____

5. explain

- a. _____
- b. _____

6. remain

a. _____

b. _____

7. pretend

a. _____

b. _____

8. join

a. _____

b. _____

9. follow

a. _____

b. _____

10. hurry

a. _____

b. _____

Let's and let

While most imperatives are said to the second-person-singular or second-person-plural pronoun you, some can include the person giving the command. Imperatives of this type begin with the contraction let's (let us) and are followed by an infinitive phrase. Infinitive phrases that follow let's omit the particle word to. Let's conveys that the person giving the command will participate in the action of the command; for example, Let's listen to some music. In this sentence, the speaker suggests that you listen to some music, and the speaker will join you in that activity. Let's is the contraction of let us, but the uncontracted form is used less often.

let's + infinitive phrase

Let's + go home.

Here are a few more examples:

Let's take a look at that scratch on your arm.

Let's work on a new way of blocking unwanted e-mails.

Let's see what's on today's agenda.

If the verb let is used without the contraction of us (let's), it still is an imperative, but it has a different meaning. In this case, the person giving the command is suggesting that "you" allow someone or something to perform an action. The structure consists of let followed by a direct object and an infinitive phrase with the particle word to omitted.

let + direct object + infinitive phrase

Let + them + sleep until ten.

For example:

Let John help you with the project.

Let me know whether you need more time for the job.

Let the problem just go away.

Let the soldiers find some shade and get a little rest.

Exercise

4.3

Rewrite the following sentences as an imperative with let's. Then, after adding an appropriate direct object, rewrite the imperative with let.

EXAMPLE:

You drove Maria to the bus station.

Let's drive Maria to the bus station.

Let Henry drive Maria to the bus station.

1. You spent about two hundred dollars.

a. _____

b. _____

2. You were talking to Jim on the phone.

a. _____

b. _____

3. You should send them another e-mail.

a. _____

b. _____

4. You report the burglary to the police.

a. _____

b. _____

5. You have repaired the rickety steps.

a. _____

b. _____

6. You tried to signal the boat struggling in the swift current.

a. _____

b. _____

7. You will send for the paramedics.

a. _____

b. _____

8. You drove to the edge of the cliff.

a. _____

b. _____

9. You have to put up a privacy fence.

a. _____

b. _____

10. You solve the difficult equation.

a. _____

b. _____

How about

Another version of an imperative appears in the form of a question. It begins with the phrase how about and is followed by a gerund and its complement. This kind of imperative sounds more like a suggestion than a command, and since it is in the form of a question, it gives the impression that it is no command at all. Also, it includes the command giver in the action. Let's peruse some examples:

How about going to the movies tonight?

How about having dinner at the Bella Luna Café?

How about giving me a hand with this heavy chest?

Why don't you

Yet another version of an imperative also appears in the form of a question. It begins with why don't you and is followed by an infinitive phrase. Unlike imperatives with how about, this imperative does not include the command giver in the action of the verb.

Why don't you go out and play for a while?

Why don't you get dressed and come down for breakfast?

Why don't you think about what you just said?

If you change the pronoun you to we in this imperative, the command giver is now included in the action of the verb. For example:

Why don't we try to get along a little better?

Why don't we set a trap for that pesky raccoon?

Why don't we take a little trip downtown and do some shopping?

Exercise

4.4

Using each infinitive phrase provided, form three imperative sentences: one with how about, one with why don't you, and one with why don't we.

EXAMPLE:

to speak to him about it

How about speaking to him about it?

Why don't you speak to him about it?

Why don't we speak to him about it?

1. to sit down under a shady tree

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

2. to come to an understanding about this matter

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

3. to let them work it out for themselves

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

4. to grant her permission to take the trip

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

5. to sing a song for Grandma

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

6. to refrain from using such language

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

7. to fertilize the fields with dung

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

8. to open a business on State Street

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

9. to register to vote in the next election

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

10. to try to behave a little better

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

Exercise

4.5

Using the cues provided, write original imperative sentences.

1. please

2. let's

3. let

4. Please, ...!

5. how about

6. why don't you

7. spend more time

8. work out

9. Please keep ...

10. why don't

Coordinating and correlative conjunctions

Conjunctions are used to combine words, phrases, or clauses. The two major types of conjunctions are coordinating conjunctions and correlative conjunctions.

word + conjunction + word phrase + conjunction + phrase clause + conjunction + clause

Coordinating conjunctions

Coordinating conjunctions are some of the most commonly used conjunctions. They include and, but, or, nor, for, so, and yet. The conjunctions and and or can be used to connect words, phrases, and clauses. For example:

John and Mary became engaged last night.
 Working in a factory and working in a mine are both hard work.
 Uncle Jake is snoozing on the couch, and Aunt Sue is working in the kitchen.

Do you want a hot dog or a hamburger?
 Did they go fishing or hiking out in the forest?
 We could take a trip to Canada, or we could save more money and go to Europe.

The other coordinating conjunctions are used primarily to combine clauses, and those clauses are separated by a comma. Let's look at some examples:

You say you love me, but you never hold me anymore.
 She doesn't believe in me, nor does she understand my goals for myself.
 Yes, I committed the crime, for there was no other way out for me.
 We're out of money, so we've come to you for a loan.
 I want you to go on this trip, yet I worry that you're really not old enough.

In some cases, it is possible to make the second clause "elliptical"—that is, omit a portion of the clause that is understood. This can occur if the subjects of the two clauses are identical. For example:

We could take a trip to Canada or save more money and go to Europe.
 You say you love me but never hold me anymore.
 She doesn't believe in me nor understand my goals for myself.
 I want you to go on the trip yet worry that you're really not old enough.

When the second clause is elliptical, the comma separating the two clauses is usually omitted. In certain cases, a comma can be used to avoid confusion.

With the conjunction provided in parentheses, use the set of cue words to form two clauses of a sentence. Use the same subject in the two clauses. Then rewrite the sentence with the second clause in its elliptical form.

EXAMPLE: (and) look for / treasure / hidden / cabin / hope / become / rich

We were looking for a treasure hidden in the old cabin, and we were hoping to become rich from the discovery.

We were looking for a treasure hidden in the old cabin and hoping to become rich from the discovery.

1. (and) during vacation / spend / seashore / snorkeling / beautiful fish

a. _____

b. _____

2. (but) attend / reception / candidate / become ill / stay home

a. _____

b. _____

3. (or) stay / city / travel / Mexico / visit / relatives

a. _____

b. _____

4. (nor) care for / ideas / about / trust / judgment / about

a. _____

b. _____

5. (and) tell lies / about / ruin / friendship / with

a. _____

b. _____

6. (yet) give / opportunity / work / concern / lack skill / maturity

a. _____

b. _____

Write an appropriate completion for each of the following sentences.

1. The lawyers met for hours behind closed doors, but

2. Can you spend the weekend with us in Miami, or

3. The soldiers were sweating from the intense heat, for

4. You've really bungled this project, so

5. The dean has authorized a scholarship for her, yet

6. _____, but we continued on our journey as though nothing were wrong.
7. _____, or we might have to sell our house.
8. _____, for an honest man doesn't have to explain himself.
9. _____, so the investors decided to rely on his judgment.
10. _____, yet there still is room for doubt.

Write original sentences with the conjunctions provided.

1. or _____
2. nor _____
3. for _____
4. so _____
5. yet _____

Correlative conjunctions

Correlative conjunctions are pairs of words that function together to combine other words or phrases in a sentence. The words in the pairs of conjunctions cannot be separated and used alone; to have the intended meaning, they must be used together. The following pairs are used as correlative conjunctions: as/as, both/and, either/or, hardly/when, if/then, neither/nor, no sooner/than, not only/but also, rather/than, scarcely/when, and whether/or.

Standard forms

The correlative conjunctions can combine two subjects to form a compound subject. They can link two direct objects or two verb phrases. They can even combine two complete clauses. The following sentences illustrate combined subjects:

Both Frank and his brother worked in their father's shop.
Either the weather or the bad road caused the accident.

These example sentences illustrate combined clauses:

I had hardly begun to speak when the power went out.
If you are going to argue with me, (then) I'm going to leave.
He is as good an athlete as he is a (good) student.

In the following sentence, neither/nor combines two objects:

You have neither a driver's license nor the skill to drive a car.

The following example illustrates combined verb phrases:

We would rather play soccer than go for a run.

The conjunction pair whether/or combines two phrases or clauses.

Has she decided whether to take one suitcase or two?
His interest in music was dependent upon whether he was listening to a favorite song or was being forced to practice the violin.

It is common to omit then from the correlative pair if/then, because its meaning is understood.

If it rains, then we'll stay home. or If it rains, we'll stay home.

When using whether/or, you can combine two clauses or phrases. The clause following or can be elliptical because its meaning is understood.

I don't know whether to go on a diet or not (to go on a diet).

Exercise

5.4

Complete each sentence that follows with any appropriate phrase.

1. The little girl is as sweet as _____.
2. Both Laura and Jane _____.

3. No sooner had she left my apartment _____.
4. You should either get up early or _____.
5. If what you say is true, _____.
6. No sooner had Tom said, "I love you," than _____.
7. Have you decided whether to _____?
8. Scarcely had I opened my eyes, when _____.
9. No sooner _____ than Joe showed up.
10. _____ nor any interest in this project.

Singular or plural verb

When certain correlative conjunctions combine two subjects, it is the subject closer to the verb that determines whether the verb will have a singular or a plural ending. For example:

Neither John nor his brother has a girlfriend right now.	singular
Neither John nor his sisters have ever gone abroad.	plural
It is either Bill or his friend who speaks German.	singular
It is either Bill or his friends who speak German.	plural

In the case of the correlative conjunction both/and, the conjunction and tells you that a compound subject is formed, and therefore the verb will always be a plural.

Both Mary and her sister are taking ballet.
Both Mary and her three sisters are taking ballet.

Exercise

5.5

Write original sentences with the correlative conjunctions provided. Include the cue word in parentheses in each of your sentences.

EXAMPLE:

both/and (wolf)

Both a wolf and a coyote prey on smaller animals.

1. either/or (diplomat)

2. neither/nor (famous)

3. if/then (war)

4. not only/but also (careless)

5. hardly/when (roof)

6. as/as (playful)

7. whether/or (to study)

8. scarcely/when (snake)

9. rather/than (run away)

10. no sooner/than (bear)

Exercise

5•6

Using the cues provided, write complete sentences. If part of a correlative conjunction is provided, include the missing part in your sentence.

EXAMPLE: both Both Tom and Laura speak fluent French.

1. and _____

2. but _____

3. for _____

4. so _____

5. either _____

6. not only _____

7. no sooner _____

8. rather _____

9. scarcely _____

10. if _____

Subordinating conjunctions and conjunctive adverbs

Subordinating conjunctions combine two clauses much in the same way as coordinating conjunctions, but there is a significant difference between the two types of conjunctions. A clause that follows a subordinating conjunction cannot stand alone and is dependent on a main clause to complete its meaning. These clauses are often called dependent clauses.

main clause + subordinating conjunction + dependent clause

Subordinating conjunctions

Some of the most commonly used subordinating conjunctions are listed here:

after	even though	that
although	how	though
as	if	till
as if	inasmuch as	unless
as long as	in order that	until
as much as	lest	when
as soon as	now that	whenever as though	provided (that)	where because	since	wherever
before	so that	while
even if	than	why

If a sentence begins with a clause introduced by a subordinating conjunction, that clause will be separated from the main clause by a comma. For example:

After I received the horrible news, I fell into a deep depression.

If you can lend us a hand, we can pay you a few dollars.

When the train's horn began to sound, we knew there was trouble ahead.

If the clause introduced by a subordinating conjunction follows the main clause, a comma is not required.

I don't know why you treat me this way.

We'll wait in the car until the rain stops.

The young couple hurried to the bank as soon as they received the check.

The conjunction because tends to use a comma to separate its clause from the main clause whether it stands at the beginning of the sentence or follows the main clause. However, when the subordinate clause follows the main clause, the use of a comma is optional, particularly when the verb in the main clause is negated.

You can't go back to class yet(,) because you still have the flu.

Because you got drunk, your license has been revoked.

Exercise

6.1

Using the conjunction provided, write an appropriate clause to complete each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE: If you help me with the dishes, I will help you with your homework.

1. When _____, she dropped the vase she was dusting.
2. Although _____, I'm still in love with you.
3. As long as _____, we will stand beside you.
4. In order that _____, you will have to have a complete physical examination.
5. Wherever _____, you will find your success in life.
6. Even though _____, I am willing to work out our differences.
7. Unless _____, you won't be welcome in this house again.
8. Providing that _____, she will be allowed to enter graduate school.
9. After _____, they can start getting ready for bed.
10. Since _____, you have become part of our family.

The conjunction since has two meanings and, therefore, is used in two different ways:

◆ The reason for an action

Since you refuse to explain your behavior, I have to side with Mary.

Since there is little doubt about his guilt, the judge fined him a hundred dollars.

◆ A time in the past when something occurred

Since you first arrived on campus, I've had my eye on you.

Since their son left home, they haven't heard a word from him.

Positioning for emphasis

The clause that appears first in a sentence is usually the one that is emphasized. This is true of both subordinating clauses and main clauses.

When he finally got home, he stretched out on the sofa to rest.

emphasis on when he finally got home

He stretched out on the sofa to rest when he finally got home.

emphasis on he stretched out on the sofa to rest

Exercise

6.2

Using the conjunction provided, write an appropriate clause to complete each sentence that follows. Then rewrite the sentence by placing the subordinate clause at the beginning of the sentence.

EXAMPLE: He won't get paid unless he finishes the job.
Unless he finishes the job, he won't get paid.

1. I'm going to make some breakfast while _____.
2. She always visits the museums whenever _____.
3. The jurors couldn't believe the witness as long as _____.
4. Can you set the table for me after _____?
5. His mother was less concerned about him now that _____.
6. They resolved the problem before _____.
7. John opened a savings account once _____.
8. You will receive your inheritance assuming that _____.
9. I didn't feel like going to bed although _____.
10. You can't watch television until _____.

Complete each sentence that follows with any appropriate clause. Use a subordinating conjunction that makes sense in the context of the sentence.

EXAMPLE: Margaret burst into tears when he asked her to marry him.

1. _____ , it stopped raining and the sun came out again.
2. _____ , he worked in France as a translator.
3. _____ , I'm going to take away all your privileges.
4. _____ , the hikers decided to return home early.
5. _____ , no one will trust the woman.
6. _____ , he was one of the best-liked boys in school.
7. _____ , you'll never get into college.
8. _____ , the bank will make her a loan of a thousand dollars.
9. We'd stay in Paris longer _____ .
10. By the end of the day, they were exhausted _____ .

Using the conjunctions provided, write original sentences that contain a clause introduced by a subordinating conjunction and a main clause. Place the subordinating clause before or after the main clause.

EXAMPLE: although

Although her health had been failing, the queen attended the ceremony.

OR

The queen attended the ceremony although her health had been failing.

1. whenever

2. as long as

3. as if

4. assuming that

5. because

6. where

7. in order that

8. since (a time in the past when something occurred)

9. since (the reason for an action)

10. how

Tenses

You may have noticed that a variety of tenses and various auxiliary verbs can be used in both subordinating and main clauses. Let's look at some specific examples of how tenses vary. In the present tense and in the past tense with most conjunctions, both clauses are in the same tense.

Present	When I travel in Europe, I prefer to stay in small hotels.
Past	When I traveled in Europe, I preferred to stay in small hotels.

The other tenses and the progressive tenses are not so reliable. One tense may be used in one clause and another tense in the other clause. For example, with when and while, one clause can be in the progressive tense and the other not.

I was sleeping in the living room when I heard a strange noise.
While I was sleeping in the living room, I heard a strange noise.

She had been preparing supper when the kitchen door flew open.
While she had been preparing supper, the kitchen door flew open.

Notice in the preceding examples that in the progressive tense, the past perfect can substitute for the past tense. This fact can be further illustrated by comparing the following pairs of sentences with those just illustrated:

I had been sleeping in the living room when I heard a strange noise.
While I had been sleeping in the living room, I heard a strange noise.

She was preparing supper when the kitchen door flew open.
While she was preparing supper, the kitchen door flew open.

When a main clause is in the future tense, the present tense is used in the subordinating clause.

or

Complete each sentence that follows with an appropriate clause and in the needed tense.

EXAMPLE: She will forget about him after enough time goes by.

1. Open the front door _____.
2. _____, we can work on your résumé together.
3. While he was studying at the library, _____.
4. _____, take the dog out for a walk.
5. When Ms. Harris goes on vacation, _____.
6. Whenever Robert plays his clarinet, _____.
7. Once he finally understood what she meant, _____.
8. Please have your passport and visa ready _____.
9. _____ if that is truly what you want me to do.
10. Inasmuch as there is so little time left, _____.

Using the conjunctions provided, write original sentences that contain two clauses, one of which should be in the future tense.

EXAMPLE: while While you clean up the kitchen, I'll get the kids ready for bed.

1. until _____
2. once _____
3. if _____
4. before _____
5. unless _____

Conjunctive adverbs

Certain adverbial expressions can function as conjunctions. They are called conjunctive adverbs, and they combine two clauses just as other conjunctions do. However, there is a different approach to punctuation with conjunctive adverbs: a semicolon precedes a conjunctive adverb, and a comma follows it. Here are some commonly used conjunctive adverbs:

after all	in addition	next
also	incidentally	nonetheless
as a result	indeed	on the contrary
besides	in fact	on the other hand
consequently	in other words	otherwise
finally	instead	still
for example	likewise	then
furthermore	meanwhile	therefore
hence	moreover	thus
however	nevertheless

Use conjunctive adverbs to combine two clauses that are closely linked by meaning or intent. For example:

Robert spoke out of turn; nonetheless, his statement made sense, and everyone agreed with him.

My daughter is quite shy; however, she is an aggressive athlete when playing soccer.

You have to pay your back rent immediately; otherwise, I'll be forced to evict you.

Exercise

6·7

Combine the following pairs of sentences with any appropriate conjunctive adverb.

EXAMPLE:

Jake lied. His father was forced to punish him.

Jake lied; therefore, his father was forced to punish him.

1. Tom was lounging under a tree. The other boys were loading rocks onto the truck.

2. The woman stole his watch and ring. She attempted to take a credit card from his pocket.

3. The operation was a miserable failure. The poor woman died on the operating table.

4. I was supposed to go to class. I decided to go to the river for a swim.

5. Mr. Helms collects old coins. He has several rare gold pieces from Spain.

6. There will be a test tomorrow. You'll also have a lengthy assignment for over the weekend.

7. The woman didn't understand that it was a crime. She was probably not in her right mind.

8. Jim drank too much, spent too much, and caroused too much. He acted like a jackass.

9. You place the chemicals in a beaker. You light the Bunsen burner.

10. Don't be afraid to ask him for a loan. He can afford it.

Unlike the case with other conjunctions, conjunctive adverbs work best when they follow the main clause. Also, in contrast to subordinating clauses, clauses that follow conjunctive adverbs make complete sense and can stand alone. Compare the following:

Clause following a conjunctive adverb

Finally, he spoke up about the idea.
Meanwhile, Bill worked on the car.
For example, Einstein was a poor student.
In fact, I was once in Brazil.

Subordinating clause

When he spoke up about the idea
Since Bill worked on the car
Although Einstein was a poor student
Whether I was once in Brazil

Exercise

6·8

Complete each sentence that follows with an appropriate clause.

EXAMPLE: He waited an hour for a table; however, the wait was worth it, for the food was delicious.

1. _____ ; nonetheless, I stayed through the whole concert.
2. _____ ; besides, she was a wonderful dancer.
3. The storm was battering their tent; nevertheless, _____ .
4. They were swimming for their lives; finally, _____ .
5. He was a well-known thief and liar; indeed, _____ .
6. _____ ; for example, there is evidence of climate change.
7. _____ ; furthermore, I have proof that her documents are forgeries.
8. The children can play several instruments; in fact, _____ .
9. Mr. Dean didn't participate in the discussion; instead, _____ .
10. You have to pay your fine now; otherwise, _____ .

Using the conjunctive adverbs provided, write original sentences that contain two clauses.

EXAMPLE:

however

I can't come to your wedding; however, my son will be there to cheer you on.

1. besides

2. nonetheless

3. still

4. consequently

5. thus

6. meanwhile

7. otherwise

8. therefore

9. incidentally

10. moreover

11. in other words

12. in fact

13. as a result

14. also

15. on the other hand

Exercise

6•10

Write original sentences with the following conjunctions provided. Note that these conjunctions are of various types: coordinating, subordinating, correlative, and conjunctive adverbs.

1. although

2. but

3. yet

4. unless

5. since

6. accordingly

7. providing that

8. in addition

9. either/or

10. as if

Pronouns

•7•

In the category of pronouns, people tend to be most familiar with personal pronouns, since these parts of speech are widely used in the English language. Other types of pronouns also exist, however, and they must be identified and practiced in order for you to be able to use them well in sentence writing. This chapter addresses the following types of pronouns: personal pronouns, relative pronouns, demonstrative pronouns, reflexive pronouns, indefinite pronouns, reciprocal pronouns, and intensive pronouns.

All pronouns are used as a replacement for a form of a noun. For example:

- ◆ Pronoun as a subject

the man is → he is

- ◆ Pronoun as an object

we saw the man → we saw him

- ◆ Possessive pronoun

the man's → his

Personal pronouns

The personal pronouns have a subjective form, an objective form, and a possessive form. The subjective form is used in place of a noun subject of a sentence. The objective form is used in place of a noun serving as either a direct object, an indirect object, or the object of a preposition. The possessive form replaces a possessive noun formed with an apostrophe plus s (for example, Bill's) or in a prepositional phrase introduced by of (for example, of Bill). The personal pronouns are as follows:

SUBJECTIVE	OBJECTIVE	POSSESSIVE
I	me	my/mine
you	you	your/yours
he	him	his/his
she	her	her/hers
it	it	its/its
we	us	our/ours
they	them	their/theirs
who	whom	whose/whose
what	what	whose/whose

When a possessive modifies a noun, the first possessive form in the preceding list of pairs is used:

My car is new.
Her books were on the floor.
Their tent blew over in the wind.

When the possessive is used in place of the possessive word and the noun it modifies, the noun is omitted, and the second form of the pairs is used.

Mine is new.
Hers were on the floor.
Theirs blew over in the wind.

It is only the third-person pronouns (he, she, it, they, who, and what) that are substitutions for a noun. He, she, and it replace singular nouns.

The doctor is young.	He is young.
Their daughter was ill.	She was ill.
Jim opened the cage.	He opened it.

They replaces plural nouns—both animate and inanimate.

Are the boys home?	Are they home?
Did you meet our visitors ?	Did you meet them ?

Both who and what are used in questions.

Jack broke his arm.	Who broke his arm?
The dog ate the pie .	What did the dog eat?

The first- and second-person pronouns (I, you, we) are not replacements for nouns but rather function on their own. However, I can be combined with nouns or other pronouns, and that combination can be replaced by a form of we. For example:

Jane and I live on the same street.	We live on the same street.
The girls saw Tom and me .	The girls saw us .
You and I will always be friends.	We will always be friends.
She and I started a club.	We started a club.

Exercise

7.1

A pronoun serves as the subject in each of the following sentences. Using that pronoun as your cue, write one sentence with that pronoun serving as a direct or indirect object; write a second sentence using the pronoun as the object of a preposition; and write a third sentence using the pronoun as a possessive. Link the content of each sentence so that you create a simple story line.

EXAMPLE:

She developed a friendship with John.
Did John take her out on a date?
Not really, but John spoke with her every day.
Her father never really grew to like John.

1. They broke down on a regular basis.

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

2. It destroyed several houses on the edge of town.

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

3. We never allowed the dogs in the dining room during meals.

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

4. I want to travel to Mexico during winter vacation.

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

5. You bought new clothes and shoes but never went to the party.

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

6. He had to laugh when he saw his brother dressed as a clown.

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

7. She caught a bad cold and had to stay home a few days.

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

Relative pronouns

Relative pronouns are used to combine two sentences that contain identical nouns or pronouns. The sentence in which the noun is replaced by a relative pronoun becomes a subordinating clause. As such, that clause cannot stand alone; it functions as part of the main clause. The person and number of the antecedent of the relative pronoun will determine the person and number of the relative pronoun.

person and number of antecedent → person and number of relative pronoun

The English relative pronouns are who, whom, whose, which, that, and an elliptical form, in which the relative pronoun is omitted but understood. The forms of who and which are used to introduce a nonrestrictive relative clause—that is, a clause that gives parenthetical information. Nonrestrictive relative clauses are set off from the rest of the sentence by commas. That introduces a restrictive relative clause—that is, a clause that defines the antecedent in the main clause. Let's look at some example sentences:

◆ Nonrestrictive relative clauses

He met the mayor, who was elected in a landslide.

The primary information is that he met the mayor. The writer of this sentence is giving incidental information (the mayor was elected in a landslide) that is not necessarily pertinent to the fact that he met the mayor.

She approached the officer, whom her brother knew from college.

The primary information is that she approached the officer. The writer of this sentence is giving incidental information (her brother knew the officer from college) that is not necessarily pertinent to the fact that she approached the officer.

I opened the ledger, which had two large ink stains on it.

The primary information is that I opened the ledger. The writer of this sentence is giving incidental information (the ledger had two large ink stains on it) that is not necessarily pertinent to the fact that I opened the ledger.

The relative clauses just illustrated merely provide parenthetical information; the information is not necessary for the meaning of the main clause. Those clauses could be omitted, because they do not enhance the meaning of the main clause:

He met the mayor.
She approached the officer.
I opened the ledger.

◆ Restrictive relative clauses

He met the mayor that was accused of unethical practices.

He didn't meet just any mayor. The relative clause explains more about its antecedent: this mayor was accused of unethical practices.

She approached the officer that had given her a ticket.

She didn't approach just any officer. The relative clause explains more about its antecedent: this officer had given her a ticket.

I opened the ledger that was hidden in the back of my boss's closet.

I didn't open just any ledger. The relative clause explains more about its antecedent: this ledger was hidden in the back of my boss's closet.

When writing sentences with relative clauses in them, it is necessary to choose the appropriate relative pronoun. If you wish to make a parenthetical statement, choose a nonrestrictive relative pronoun. If you wish to add information that explains the antecedent in the main clause, choose a restrictive relative pronoun. For example:

David danced with the woman, who has a summer house on the shore.
David danced with the woman that had been flirting with him.
David danced with the woman who had been flirting with him.

Be aware that who can function as a restrictive relative pronoun and can replace that.

◆ Elliptical relative pronouns

I found the little ashtray (that) you made in junior high school.
We finally arrived at the corner (that) John had been waiting on for hours.
Here's the jacket (that) I bought yesterday.

Notice that the word that can be omitted in these clauses only when they are used as objects. When that is used as the subject of the clause, it must be retained.

Here's the jacket that was made in France. subject
Have you met our new neighbors that live on Hyde Street? subject

An elliptical relative pronoun can be derived from a clause containing either that or which. However, when the relative pronoun is omitted, the tone of the clause becomes restrictive.

Here's the jacket, which I bought yesterday. → Here's the jacket I bought yesterday.
Here's the jacket that I bought yesterday. → Here's the jacket I bought yesterday.

It is correct to use whose to refer to either an animate or an inanimate antecedent. With inanimate antecedents, the prepositional phrase of which can replace whose. For example:

◆ Animate antecedents

Tim liked the girl, whose eyes were following him wherever he went.
Have you interviewed the man whose house burned down?

◆ Inanimate antecedents

She bought a sweater, whose dark color didn't flatter her.
She bought a sweater, the dark color of which didn't flatter her.

The judge studied the document, whose content was extremely vague.
The judge studied the document, the content of which was extremely vague.

Prepositions in relative clauses require a special look. Their position is not static; they can occupy two different places in the clause. In formal style, the preposition precedes a nonrestrictive relative pronoun. For example:

The lawyer, from whom he received the information, is under investigation.
I cannot explain the circumstances, under which she gradually lost her wealth.
They innocently hiked toward the woods, in which cannibals were said to dwell.

In a less formal style, the preposition can be placed at the end of the clause:

The lawyer, whom he received the information from, is under investigation.

In a still less formal style, the correct use of whom is avoided:

The lawyer, who he received the information from, is under investigation.

When that and who(m) are used as restrictive relative pronouns, prepositions always appear at the end of the relative clause. This is also true with elliptical relative pronouns.

The dress that she slipped into was much too big for her.
The dress she slipped into was much too big for her.

That's the old man whom Thomas works for.
That's the old man Thomas works for.

Exercise

7.2

Complete each sentence that follows with an appropriate nonrestrictive relative clause.

EXAMPLE: Henry ordered a cheese pizza, which is not his girlfriend's favorite food.

1. The soldiers stormed the fort, _____.
2. We spent a week in the capital, _____.
3. I'd like to introduce you to our new coach, _____.
4. Dr. Flores, _____, has to return to Madrid.
5. Can you explain this formula, _____?

Follow the same directions, but provide a restrictive relative clause.

6. He hurried up to the boys _____.
7. I need a laptop _____.
8. The man _____ is a friend of mine.
9. I'd prefer to speak to the clerk _____.
10. Send me a copy of the message _____.

Exercise

7.3

Complete each sentence that follows with (a) a clause that is introduced by a preposition, (b) a nonrestrictive clause that places the preposition at the end of the clause, (c) a restrictive clause with a preposition, and (d) an elliptical pronoun with a preposition.

EXAMPLE: He found a large chest
a. , in which someone had hidden a map.
b. , which he found some money in.
c. that a cat was sleeping on.
d. his father had paid a hundred dollars for.

1. The girls had to find accommodations in a village
 - a. _____
 - b. _____
 - c. _____
 - d. _____

2. Mr. Dean hoped to speak with the owners

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____
- d. _____

3. She made her way to the bed

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____
- d. _____

4. Sally believed she was in love with the actor

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____
- d. _____

5. I avoid meetings

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____
- d. _____

Demonstrative pronouns

The singular demonstrative pronouns are this and that. This refers to someone or something nearby or part of the present topic of conversation. That points to someone or something in the distance or referred to in the past. Their plural forms are these and those and refer, respectively, to something nearby or in the distance. These pronouns also function as adjectives.

located nearby + this/these located in the distance + that/those

This fellow is in a lot of trouble.

That fellow was rather arrogant.

These people are friends of mine.

Those people work for Mr. Paine.

He is nearby. We're talking about him now.

He is in the distance. We talked about him earlier.

They are nearby. We're talking about them now.

They are in the distance. We talked about them earlier.

When these pronouns are not accompanied by a noun, they function as pronouns rather than as adjectives, but their meaning of closeness or distance from a person or thing is maintained.

This is the one I want.

That was the last one.

I borrowed these from Jim.

Were those once a different color?

As is true of other pronouns, demonstrative pronouns can be subjects or objects. To indicate a possessive, a demonstrative pronoun becomes the object of the preposition of. Here are examples:

This really wasn't necessary.

Did you buy those in Mexico?

We spoke about that a moment ago.

What is the meaning of this?

b. _____

Reflexive pronouns

Reflexive pronouns are used only as objects and never as subjects of a sentence. They can be direct objects, indirect objects, or the objects of prepositions.

He cut himself shaving.

He bought himself some new ties.

He was talking to himself.

direct object

indirect object

object of preposition

Compare the English personal pronouns with their reflexive-pronoun counterparts:

PERSONAL PRONOUNS	REFLEXIVE PRONOUNS
I	myself
you	yourself
he	himself
she	herself
it	itself
we	ourselves
you	yourselves
they	themselves

When the subject and object are different persons or things, the object is a personal pronoun. For example:

The man asked her what happened.

It is when the subject and object are the same person or thing that a reflexive pronoun is used.

The man asked himself what happened.

Exercise

7.5

Write two sentences with the reflexive pronoun indicated and the cue words provided in parentheses. In your first sentence, use the reflexive as a direct object. In your second sentence, use the reflexive as an indirect object.

EXAMPLE:

himself (illness / watch)

Despite a long illness, the elderly man carried himself well.

Tom wants to buy himself a new watch.

1. herself (spring / ring)

- a. _____
- b. _____

2. yourself (rarely / soon)

- a. _____
- b. _____

3. ourselves (dinner / dessert)

- a. _____
- b. _____

4. myself (angrily / similar)

- a. _____
- b. _____

5. themselves (sandwiches / wine)

a. _____

b. _____

Using the first cue provided, write a sentence with that cue as the object of a preposition. Then, using the reflexive pronoun provided, write a sentence with that pronoun as the object of a preposition.

EXAMPLE: sister / herself

Maria is going to buy a used car for her sister.

Maria is going to buy a used car for herself.

6. grandfather / himself

a. _____

b. _____

7. soldier / yourselves

a. _____

b. _____

8. flight attendant / myself

a. _____

b. _____

9. dancer / herself

a. _____

b. _____

10. guests / themselves

a. _____

b. _____

Indefinite pronouns

The indefinite pronouns have a unique function. They act in a sentence like other pronouns—that is, they are substitutions for nouns; however, the indefinite pronouns are not a replacement for a specific noun. Instead, they refer to anyone, everyone, or no one in particular. Here are some of the most commonly used indefinite pronouns that are always singular:

anyone/anybody

each

either

everyone/everybody much

neither

no one/nobody

one

someone/somebody

Each pronoun in the four pairs of indefinite pronouns (anyone/anybody, everyone/everybody, no one/nobody, someone/somebody) is identical in meaning to its companion pronoun.

Anyone can play this game.
No one understands me.

→ Anybody can play this game.
→ Nobody understands me.

Also, do not confuse the indefinite pronoun one (a number) with the personal pronoun one (a person).

Indefinite Personal

One of you will have to stay on duty tonight.
One might at first assume that his theory is correct.

It's important to recognize these pronouns as singular, because some of them are used with prepositional phrases that can contain a plural. This construction sometimes causes confusion and results in the use of a plural verb where a singular verb is needed.

Each of the dismissed employees receives a termination bonus.

Since each is a singular, the singular verb receives is needed in this sentence. The plural noun in the prepositional phrase of the dismissed employees is not the subject of the sentence.

Here is another example:

One of you has to take responsibility.

Since one is a singular, the singular verb has is needed in this sentence. The plural pronoun you is not the subject of the sentence.

Even when more than one person or thing is understood, these pronouns still always use only a singular verb. For example:

These two ties are the right price, but neither really appeals to me.

A few indefinite pronouns are plural, such as both, few, many, and several, and they require a plural verb when used as the subject of a sentence. For example:

Both of these women are candidates for mayor.
Few understand his motives.
Many of his opponents lie about his record.

There are also indefinite pronouns that are considered either singular or plural:

all	most any	none
more	some

The choice of a singular or plural verb with these indefinite pronouns depends on their usage in the sentence and on any accompanying prepositional phrase:

◆ Singular

All is lost!
You can take the last piece of pie. More is coming.
Don't eat the whole cake. Some is for Bill.

◆ Plural

I met John's fraternity brothers. Most are quite nice.
All of the children have had their inoculations.
There are several magazines on the floor, but none are mine.

Using the indefinite pronoun provided, write an original sentence with the pronoun as the subject of the sentence.

1. much _____
2. either _____
3. each _____
4. neither _____
5. one _____
6. everybody _____
7. no one _____
8. few of them _____
9. many _____
10. each of the contestants _____

Reciprocal pronouns

There are only two reciprocal pronouns: one another and each other. Either one is correct, and each can replace the other in a sentence. They are used to combine two sentences that say that two persons or things are carrying out the same action. For example:

John loves Mary. Mary loves John.

→ John and Mary love one another.

The dog glares at the cat. The cat glares at the dog.

→ The dog and cat glare at each other.

She kissed me. I kissed her.

→ We kissed each other.

When pronouns are used in pairs of sentences as in the last example (She kissed me. I kissed her.), the pronoun I indicates that a second-person-plural pronoun (we) will be used with a reciprocal pronoun. If the pronoun is in the third person, a third-person-plural pronoun (they) will be used with a reciprocal pronoun.

He sees her. She sees him.

→ They see one another.

Intensive pronouns

Intensive pronouns are often mistaken as reflexive pronouns because they look like reflexive pronouns.

PERSONAL PRONOUNS

I
you he she it

myself yourself himself herself itself

we you they ourselves yourselves themselves

Intensive pronouns function differently from reflexive pronouns. Their purpose is to emphasize the subject of the sentence. Compare the following pairs of sentences, in which the subject is emphasized in the second pair.

I believe that war with them can be avoided.
I myself believe that war with them can be avoided.

You said that you could afford it.
You yourself said that you could afford it.

They are the ones to blame.
They themselves are the ones to blame.

Exercise

7·7

Rewrite each sentence that follows with the appropriate intensive pronoun.

1. William tried to free the car from the muddy rut.

2. Several of the men heard the strange sounds in the attic.

3. I longed to return to my homeland.

4. Ms. Thomas and I were rather good dancers.

5. The administration is responsible for our improved economy.

6. Nancy broke down in tears upon hearing the news.

7. You tried to get some help for them.

8. He felt ashamed for what had happened that day.

9. They attempted to exploit the situation.

Prepositions

Prepositions are used to introduce a prepositional phrase that ends with a noun phrase or pronoun.

preposition + object of preposition

from + the old man

Some prepositions can also function as adverbs or conjunctions. Following is a list of the most commonly used English prepositions:

about	below	from	through above	beneath	in	throughout across	beside	into	till after	besides	like	to against	between	near	toward along	beyond	of	under
among	by	off	until around	despite	on	up
at	down	out	with before	during	over	within behind	for	since	without

There is a significant difference between beside and besides. Use beside when you mean near or next to. Use besides when you mean in addition to or other than. For example:

He stood beside her bed.
No one cared besides Jack.

He stood next to her bed.
No one cared other than Jack.

The prepositions till and until can be used interchangeably.

You have to wait till noon.
They worked till the next morning.

= You have to wait until noon.
= They worked until the next morning.

Compound prepositions

Some prepositions are called compound prepositions because they are composed of more than one word. For example:

ahead of
because of by means of contrary to in addition to in back of in case of
in front of in lieu of in light of

in place of in regard to in spite of instead of in view of next to on account of out of prior to

Whether a preposition is a single word or a compound preposition, it is still used in the same way: to introduce a prepositional phrase.

We went straight home after the concert.
He arrived late because of the concert.

She received a gift from her brother.
Jane invited Alex instead of her brother.

A woodpecker flew through the window.
A stranger was standing next to the window.

Using of

The usage of the preposition of may seem obvious, but it requires a special explanation. The preposition of not only is used in several compound prepositions but also plays a role when it stands alone. The preposition of can serve in place of an apostrophe plus s to indicate a possessive. Let's look at some examples:

Preposition of the roar of the lion

the father of the bride
the fur of the dog

Possessive

the lion's roar
the bride's father
the dog's fur

Although the preceding examples show the two forms used to express ownership, the apostrophe-plus-s form tends to be used most frequently with persons or other animate nouns, while the preposition of is usually preferred for inanimate objects. For example:

the quality of his voice a ring of truth an explanation of grammar

the length of the sidewalk a large stack of books
the depth of the river

In some cases, the possessive form is suitable for inanimate objects (the sidewalk's length, the river's depth), but, in general, the preposition of is used to show possession with an inanimate object.

It is often the case that of is used as a synonym for about. For example:

Did you know of the accident?
Please don't speak of this again.
Does he have knowledge of this case?

Did you know about the accident?
Please don't speak about this again.
Does he have knowledge about this case?

Exercise

8.1

Using the prepositional phrases provided, write original sentences.

EXAMPLE: of the story The ending of the story was sad.

1. of her penmanship _____
2. of the month _____
3. of mathematics _____
4. of the baby _____
5. of his tuxedo _____
6. of the carpet _____
7. of the United States _____
8. of our team _____
9. of his wife _____
10. of the sandwich _____

Exercise

8.2

Using each of the prepositions provided once, write two original sentences that also include the cue phrase provided in parentheses.

EXAMPLE: for / on account of (his sister)
Jack had a good suggestion for his sister.

Uncle Bill remained at home on account of his sister.

1. from / in addition to (Ms. Garcia)
 - a. _____
 - b. _____
2. on / in back of (their mobile home)
 - a. _____
 - b. _____
3. about / in light of (this critical situation)
 - a. _____
 - b. _____

4. beyond / in place of (the wooden fence)

a. _____

b. _____

5. in / out of (the classroom)

a. _____

b. _____

6. during / prior to (their weekly meeting)

a. _____

b. _____

7. besides / in case of (another problem)

a. _____

b. _____

8. with / by means of (atomic energy)

a. _____

b. _____

9. till / in view of (final examinations)

a. _____

b. _____

10. despite / contrary to (his stated goal)

a. _____

b. _____

Among and between

In order to write accurately, you have to distinguish between the prepositions among and between. Among is used with a prepositional phrase that involves more than two persons or things. Between is used only with a prepositional phrase that involves just two persons or things. Let's look at some example sentences:

Among the women in their department was a Ph.D. candidate from Canada.
I just can't decide between these two Ph.D. candidates.

We have always counted Andrea among our good friends.
Who is that standing between Andrea and Michael?

The mood among the members of the losing team was not good.
The difference between right and wrong should be obvious to you.

Complete the following sentences with any appropriate prepositional phrase.

EXAMPLE: James had a conversation with the newly arrived foreign students.

1. The boys spent a lot of time alone in _____.
2. Rita sat among _____ and chatted amiably.
3. I think I'd prefer a table by _____.
4. Contrary to _____, the contract is not yet signed.
5. When the storm came, they dashed into _____.
6. Have you decided between _____?
7. The entire first floor smells of _____.
8. The boys were hiding among _____.
9. I've been living in Peru for _____.
10. The handsome young fellow stood opposite _____.

To and out

Some words function both as prepositions and as other parts of speech. As a preposition, to describes a motion toward a place: to the garden, to the school, to the other side of the forest. As a preposition, it also identifies a person to whom something is directed or given: to John, to her, to my youngest child. In addition to these functions, to is used as a particle word in an infinitive: to run, to jump, to be. These two uses—the prepositional use and the infinitive use—must be distinguished.

If to is followed by a noun phrase or pronoun, it is being used as a preposition. If it is followed by a verb, it is being used as the particle word of an infinitive:

◆ Prepositions

The horses came running to the fence when I called.
Mr. Keller sent a large package to them.
She was hurrying to the door when she fell.

◆ Infinitives

Don't try to fool me with your fancy words.
It's going to be more difficult than I first thought.
We need to perform the surgery on her immediately.

Another difference of usage occurs with the preposition out. When it is followed by a noun phrase or pronoun, it is being used as a preposition, such as out the door. This same word can be used as an adverb that describes where someone or something is and usually indicates that someone is not at home or not in the office. Let's look at some example sentences:

◆ Prepositions

Lorraine flew out the door and ran to the bus stop.
What did you throw out the window?
Gray smoke coiled out the chimney.

◆ Adverbs

Were you out late last night?
Tom wanted to stay out with his friends.
The doctor will be out until three P.M.

The opposite of out, meaning not at home or not in the office, is in. It means at home or at the office.

I stayed in all day.
Dr. Jones won't be in today.

I stayed at home all day.
Dr. Jones won't be in the office today.

Into, onto, upon

The three prepositions into, onto, and upon are composed of two prepositions written as one word. Into indicates that someone or something is moving to the inside of an enclosure. Onto indicates that someone or something is located on top of something. Upon is a synonym for on. Consider these examples:

Karen ran into the tent and lit the lantern.	She ran to the inside of the tent.
Doug climbed onto the roof with a hammer.	He is now located on top of the roof.
A single acorn fell upon the ground.	It fell on the ground.

When any of these three prepositions is written as two separate words, the first part becomes an adverb and the second part is a preposition. For example: Walk in to your left and follow the signs to our offices. In this sentence, the adverb tells where someone should be—not out, but in. The preposition tells what direction to go: to your left.

Now consider this sentence: I was never turned on to classical music. In this sentence, the adverb on modifies the verb turned; it is not part of the preposition. The prepositional phrase is to classical music.

Now look at this sentence: Climb up onto the roof! Here the adverb up modifies the verb climb. Someone is being told in what direction to climb. The prepositional phrase onto the roof identifies the place where this person is supposed to climb.

The preposition upon is used in a couple pat phrases that do not change their form. For example:

Upon my soul!

Once upon a time . . .

an interjection meaning "I'm so surprised"
or "I can't believe it"
the opening phrase of some stories and fairy tales

Adjectival and adverbial prepositional phrases

Some prepositional phrases modify nouns or pronouns. They are called adjective phrases. Similarly, other prepositional phrases are called adverb phrases because they modify verbs, adverbs, or adjectives. Be aware that it is not the preposition that determines whether the phrase is adjectival or adverbial, but rather it is the use of the phrase. The same prepositional phrase could be an adjective phrase or an adverb phrase. For example:

The boy at the window looked hungry and cold.

The phrase at the window describes the boy; it is adjectival.

The boy stood at the window and waved.

The phrase at the window describes where he stood; it is adverbial.

When a prepositional phrase describes a noun or pronoun, it normally stands immediately after the noun or pronoun.

The girl with the bouquet beamed with pride.

Do you know the woman with Mr. Simon?

When the prepositional phrase tells where, when, how, or to what extent something is done, it is adverbial.

The men stood on the porch and chatted about the weather.

where, how

We will be leaving for Florida on Wednesday.

where, when

Exercise

8.4

Complete the following sentences by finishing each prepositional phrase with an appropriate noun phrase. Use any additional phrases to make good sense.

EXAMPLE: We rarely talked about the problems he had with his wife.

1. I returned to _____ to say good-bye to the children.
2. Why do you get into _____ ?
3. Someone next to _____ tried to steal the old coins.
4. Ms. Snyder had to speak in opposition to _____ .
5. The tourists have to get back to _____ .
6. The kittens jumped onto _____ .
7. The students with _____ .
8. The castle was located on top of _____ .
9. A child of _____ sat in a corner weeping.
10. No one among _____ .

Write original sentences containing adverbial prepositional phrases. Use the adverbial cue provided as the signal for the kind of phrase required.

EXAMPLE: where Michael sat on the sofa and read.

1. where _____
2. when _____
3. how _____
4. where _____
5. when _____
6. how _____

Pronouns in prepositional phrases

Most prepositions can be followed by pronouns that are the replacements for nouns. For example:

John came with his friends.
The girls hid behind the door.
Never speak about his illness.

John came with them.
The girls hid behind it.
Never speak about it.

However, some prepositional phrases that describe a location in a place or a time period tend to be replaced not by a preposition and a pronoun but rather by there or then, respectively. For example:

She spent a lot of time in the city.
Mark was in Asia for two years.

She spent a lot of time there. not in it
Mark was there for two years. not in it

Jim will arrive in the morning.
Were you at work on Monday?

Jim will arrive then. not in it
Were you at work then? not on it

Prepositional phrases do not normally stand alone. An exception is that in an elliptical response to a statement or question, a prepositional phrase can stand alone if the meaning of the rest of the sentence is understood.

Where did you attend college?
The cat usually sleeps under the bed.

In California.
No, under the rocking chair.

A few other prepositional phrases can stand alone, especially if they are part of an imperative or an interjection.

On your marks, get set, go!
At once!
On your feet!
For heaven's sake!

The preposition than can also be used as a conjunction. When it functions as a conjunction, it is followed by a complete clause:

◆ Preposition

My brother is a bit taller than me.

Can Mary really run faster than John?

◆ Complete clause

My brother works harder than I like to work.

Can Mary really run faster than John can?

Exercise

8·6

Rewrite the following sentences, changing the underlined prepositional phrase ending with a noun to a prepositional phrase ending with the appropriate pronoun. Use there or then where needed.

EXAMPLE: Jake sat with his friends in the library.

Jake sat with them in the library.

1. I never had anything to do with such people.

2. Did you have a good time in Mexico?

3. The twins were seated directly behind their parents.

4. We can probably meet at about eleven o'clock.

5. Was that rude remark meant for Thomas and me?

6. We used to have a lot of fun during spring vacation.

7. I am completely opposed to what you call a satisfactory contract.

8. My aunt and uncle built a small house in the Bahamas.

9. We found a map at the bottom of the treasure chest.

10. Is this a portrait of Queen Victoria?

Exercise

8·7

Write original sentences using the phrases provided.

EXAMPLE: from my dentist I received this prescription from my dentist.

1. out on the lawn _____

2. alongside the road _____

3. above the forest _____

4. on the lagoon _____

5. because of you _____

6. than her _____

7. toward the opposite shore _____

8. on to the ledge _____

9. of me _____

10. in front of it _____

Using adjectives

Adjectives are words that modify nouns or pronouns. A variety of adjectival forms must be understood in order for you to write accurately. The most common type is the descriptive adjective.

Descriptive adjectives

Precisely as their name suggests, descriptive adjectives describe someone or something. The following list contains high-frequency descriptive adjectives. Consider what they tell about a noun they might modify.

beautiful	funny	kind	short
big	handsome	little	soft blue	happy	red	tall
evil	hard	sad	ugly

The complete listing of all descriptive adjectives would be much longer. You can probably think of many other words that fit this category.

Predicative and attributive adjectives

Adjectives are used primarily in two different ways: predicatively and attributively. A predicate adjective is one that follows a linking verb and modifies a noun or pronoun “from a distance”—that is, separated from the noun itself by the verb. Some commonly used linking verbs are to be, to become, to get, to look, to seem, and to smell.

subject + linking verb + predicate adjective

Mr. Price is handsome.
My vision seems blurred.
That really smells good!
It suddenly got cold.

Naturally, adjectives can be modified by any variety of adverbs. For example:

Mr. Price is very handsome.
Today the weather became quite terrible.

Attributive adjectives, on the other hand, stand before a noun. It is common to use more than one adjective to modify nouns in this position.

attributive adjective + subject + verb

The young officer came up to me.

The frightened young officer came up to me.

An old man sat down to rest.

A tired old man sat down to rest.

You can view attributive adjectives as replacements for relative clauses that contain the linking verb to be. Compare the following two sentences with the previous two examples:

The officer, who was frightened and young, came up to me.

A man, who was tired and old, sat down to rest.

Let's look at an example of how a relative clause is changed to become an attributive adjective. Here's the original sentence, with the relative clause set off by commas:

The story, which is silly, amused the children.

To convert this sentence, the adjective silly is removed from the relative clause. The remaining words in the relative clause are omitted (as are the commas), and the adjective is placed before the noun. The result is a sentence with an attributive adjective, and that sentence conveys the same meaning as the sentence in which there was a relative clause:

The silly story amused the children.

When a noun follows a linking verb, it is called a predicate nominative. The predicate nominative is a noun that further describes the subject of the sentence. Adjectives can modify the subject, the predicate nominative, or both. For example:

The winner was a man from Holland.

The eventual winner was a man from Holland.

The winner was an athletic man from Holland.

The eventual winner was an athletic man from Holland.

A sentence with a predicate nominative can be changed by reversing the positions of the subject and the predicate nominative and still make complete sense. This can occur only with linking verbs.

An athletic man from Holland was the eventual winner.

Some adjectives can be used only as predicate adjectives. They sound awkward if used attributively. Some of the most commonly used ones are these:

afraid alive alone apart aware glad ill likely ready safe sorry (meaning apologetic) sure unable

Let's look at a couple of sentences illustrating correct versus incorrect usage:

The boy was quite alone.

correct usage

The alone boy waited in the hall.

incorrect usage

Certain other adjectives should be used only as attributive adjectives. If they are used as predicate adjectives, they should be followed by predicate nominatives.

atomic east/west eastern/western indoor/outdoor maximum nationwide

north/south northern/southern northern/western supplementary woolen

If indoor and outdoor are used predicatively, they take the adverbial form indoors and outdoors. If supplementary is used predicatively, its form changes to a noun: a supplement. In the case of woolen, when used predicatively, it becomes the phrase made of wool.

Let's again look at a pair of sentences illustrating correct usage versus incorrect usage:

An occasional rain kept the streets wet and slick.	correct usage
The rain today was only occasional .	incorrect usage

Exercise

9.1

Complete each sentence that follows with an appropriate predicate adjective. Then, write a sentence using the same adjective attributively.

EXAMPLE:

Mark was very sad.

The sad look in her eyes brought me to tears.

1. a. Are the boys _____ again?
b. _____
2. a. Grandma's kitchen smelled _____.
b. _____
3. a. How long has this woman been _____?
b. _____
4. a. Your report is _____.
b. _____
5. a. Your new tie looks _____.
b. _____
6. a. Professor Garcia seemed _____ yesterday.
b. _____
7. a. Were you _____ as a child?
b. _____
8. a. The young lawyer seemed rather _____.
b. _____

9. a. Your rose garden smells _____ !
 b. _____
10. a. Why does that little boy always look so _____ ?
 b. _____

Limiting adjectives

There are nine types of limiting adjectives: definite and indefinite articles, possessive adjectives, demonstrative adjectives, indefinite adjectives, interrogative adjectives, cardinal adjectives, ordinal adjectives, proper adjectives, and nouns used as adjectives. The obvious function of any limiting adjective is to limit or to specify some aspect of the noun it modifies.

Definite and indefinite articles

The definite and indefinite articles illustrate this limitation function well. The definite article (the) specifies someone or something as already known or mentioned. Indefinite articles (a, an) identify an unknown person or thing and persons or things in general. For example:

The man on the corner is my friend.	A specific man is the topic here. He is known to the speaker.
A man on the corner was hit by a car.	An unspecified man is the topic here. He is unknown to the speaker.
The heavy suitcase belongs to Mary.	A specific suitcase is the topic here. The speaker knows that it is heavy.
A heavy suitcase is not allowed.	Heavy suitcases in general are the topic here.

Indefinite articles are not used with plural nouns. The complete omission of an article with a plural noun indicates that the meaning is indefinite. Compare the following pairs of sentences:

Singular	Plural
The boy plays chess.	The boys play chess.
A good student must behave.	Good students must behave.

Possessive adjectives

Possessive adjectives limit the nouns they modify in terms of the ownership implied: my, your, his, her, its, our, and their. The possessive whose, which inquires into ownership, is also an interrogative adjective but belongs in this group, as well.

My new car is a Ford.	Ownership of the car is limited to me.
Her kitten became quite ill.	Ownership of the kitten is limited to her.
Our garden did well this year.	Ownership of the garden is limited to us.

Demonstrative adjectives

The demonstrative adjectives—this, that, these, and those—limit the modified noun to the one identified by the speaker: this one, that one. The demonstrative adjectives show closeness (this, these) or distance (that, those) in the same way as the demonstrative pronouns.

This book is hard to understand.

That remark was uncalled for.

These men need a job.

Do you know those people?

Exercise

9·2

Write three original sentences containing the noun or phrase provided. Use a definite article or an indefinite article (or both) in the first sentence; use a possessive adjective in the second sentence; and use a demonstrative adjective in the third. If a question mark (?) is also provided, make at least one of your sentences a question.

EXAMPLE:

jacket ?

The jacket on the bed belongs to him.

Have you seen my jacket?

This jacket is just what I've been looking for.

1. CD player ?

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

2. young children

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

3. yacht ?

- a. _____

Indefinite adjectives

Indefinite adjectives provide general information about the nouns they modify. They often answer the questions how much? or how many? Among the most common indefinite adjectives are all, any, each, every, few, many, and some. Let's look at some sentences that illustrate their use:

All work must be completed by noon.	how much work?
Each candidate will have ten minutes to speak.	how many candidates?
Are some companies in financial trouble?	how many companies?

Interrogative adjectives

The interrogative adjectives are what, which, and whose (as noted earlier, whose is also a possessive adjective). They modify nouns in the same way as other limiting adjectives. What and which inquire into a choice between two persons or things and from among a group of persons or things. Whose asks about ownership. Here are some examples:

What airline are you taking to Brazil?
What cities do you want to visit?
What day will you arrive back in the States?

Which game do you like best?
Which candidate appeals to you more?
Which dessert did you order?

Whose limousine is parked in front of the house?
Whose husband is a famous rap star?
Whose cake won first prize at the fair?

Cardinal adjectives

Cardinal adjectives are simply numbers used as adjectives. They limit the nouns they modify by specifying an amount. That amount can be as little as “zero” or as great as any number you can conceive of. For example:

One boy scraped his knee on the ground.
Fifteen girls are in the contest.
Eighty dollars was too much for the blouse.

Notice that the subject of the last of these sentences is plural, but it is considered a single quantity and therefore takes a singular verb: Eighty dollars was . . . Let’s consider the difference between the use of a singular verb and a plural verb with such quantities.

If there are eighty individual dollar bills on the floor, you can say: Eighty dollars are on the floor. If, instead, you wish to refer to the entire quantity of eighty dollars as a single sum of money, you can say: Eighty dollars is more than I want to spend.

Ordinal adjectives

Numbers are used in a slightly different adjectival form with ordinal adjectives. These adjectives limit the nouns they modify by specifying numerical order. For example:

The first question on the test was simple.
They’re celebrating their fiftieth wedding anniversary.
Jake is the twelfth boy in line.

The majority of ordinal adjectives are formed by adding -th to the end of a number: fourth, thirtieth, hundredth, and so on. There are only a few irregular forms, as follows:

CARDINAL NUMBER	ORDINAL NUMBER
one	first
two	second
three	third
five	fifth

Write an original sentence for each of the cue phrases provided.

1. each student _____
2. some residents _____
3. his first attempt _____
4. every third day _____
5. eleven players _____
6. many complaints _____
7. few demands _____
8. our daughter _____
9. the fifth row _____
10. too much noise _____

Using each cue phrase provided, write a question with what as an interrogative adjective. Then write a response to your question.

EXAMPLE:

color

What color is Jim's new suit?

Jim's new suit is bright green.

1. wristwatch
 - a. _____
 - b. _____
2. blanket
 - a. _____
 - b. _____
3. set of towels
 - a. _____
 - b. _____
4. length
 - a. _____
 - b. _____

Follow the same directions, but write your questions with which as an interrogative adjective.

5. writing implements

a. _____

b. _____

6. path

a. _____

b. _____

7. breakfast menu

a. _____

b. _____

Follow the same directions, but write your questions with whose as an interrogative adjective.

8. jewelry

a. _____

b. _____

9. Cuban relatives

a. _____

b. _____

10. coin purse

a. _____

b. _____

Proper adjectives and nouns used as adjectives

Proper adjectives are words that are proper nouns but act as modifiers of other nouns. Since proper nouns are capitalized, capitalization is also required when they are used as adjectives. A large category of proper adjectives comprises words that come from country or language names and that can be used both attributively and predicatively. Here are some examples:

I love Italian food.

Is French champagne the best?

He said the American cars are less expensive.

I believe this drawing is Japanese.

The same need for capitalization applies to proper names; however, proper names tend to be used only attributively. For example:

We read a Shakespearean play.
The Hilton mansion is hidden by trees.
The Bush administration ended in 2009.
Isn't that a Streisand song?

Many other nouns can also act as modifiers. If they are not proper nouns, they do not need to be capitalized and can be used only attributively. For example:

Several party gifts were identical.
The wedding guests were starting to get tipsy.
I think I lost my credit card.

Exercise

9.5

Using the noun cues provided, write original sentences with the nouns functioning as adjectives.

EXAMPLE: Ford There's a Ford dealership over there.

1. Elizabethan _____
2. divorce _____
3. Kennedy _____
4. recreation _____
5. chemistry _____
6. faculty _____
7. White House _____
8. movie _____
9. baseball _____
10. Jack London _____

Infinitives

In some cases, an infinitive can function as an adjective. The infinitive usually immediately follows the noun or pronoun it modifies. For example:

This is always a fun show to watch.
We still haven't found anyone to hire for this position.
Professor Keller's class would be a great one to take.

Complete each sentence that follows with any appropriate infinitive.

EXAMPLE: This is a difficult book to read.

1. We have several new plants _____ .
2. Do you have any new music _____ ?
3. This is really something _____ .
4. Do you have any money _____ ?
5. Maria still has several letters _____ .

Using the infinitives that follow as adjectives, write original sentences.

6. to develop _____
7. to clean up _____
8. to grade _____
9. to defend _____
10. to be praised _____

Using adverbs

•10•

Adverbs modify verbs, adjectives, or other adverbs. They can be individual words, phrases, or clauses.

adverb + verb adverb + adjective adverb + adverb

Adverb types and forms

There is more than one type of adverb. This chapter provides you with information on adverbs of manner, time, frequency, degree, and place, as well as adverbs that provide a comment on a situation.

Individual adverbs are formed simply by adding the suffix -ly to an adjective. Naturally, the English rules of spelling apply; for example, a final y is changed to i when an adverb is formed (happy → happily). Let's look at some example adjectives and their adverbial formation:

ADJECTIVE	ADVERB
careful	carefully
quick	quickly
simple	simply

A few adverbs are identical to their adjectival counterparts. For example:

ADJECTIVE	ADVERB
early	early fast	fast
late	late

Adjectives that describe certain increments of time look like adverbs but are true adjectives. For example:

We're paid on an hourly basis.
I take a daily vitamin supplement.
Grandma has a weekly appointment with her doctor.

Your monthly salary is going to be increased.
My yearly physical exam always makes me nervous.

Still other adjectives that look like adverbs are not related to the ones that describe increments of time. Examples are deadly, early, lively, and only.

When an adverb is used in the comparative or superlative, the suffix -ly is generally not added. However, if the comparative and superlative are formed with more and most, the suffix -ly is added.

POSITIVE	COMPARATIVE	SUPERLATIVE
quickly	quicker	(the) quickest
softly	softer	(the) softest
well	better	(the) best
awkwardly	more awkwardly	most awkwardly
beautifully	more beautifully	most beautifully carefully	more carefully	most carefully

Don't confuse late with lately. Both are adverbs, but they have different meanings.

The girls arrived late.

He's been rather moody lately.

the opposite of early recently

Adverbs of manner

Adverbs of manner form a large category. They tell how something is done. Consider the following sentences:

Martin drove slowly.

I carefully removed the battery.

She kissed the baby gently.

How did he drive? Slowly.

How did I remove the battery? Carefully.

How did she kiss the baby? Gently.

Adverbs of manner can be individual words or phrases. Let's look at some of these:

INDIVIDUAL WORDS	PHRASES
badly	in anger
politely	with a sly grin
sarcastically	with great sadness

Adverbs of manner tend to follow the predicate of a sentence.

subject + predicate + adverb of manner

Bill + spoke to her + angrily.

The team played badly.

He tried to speak politely.

She gave them the news with great sadness.

Tom began to shout in anger.

Adverbs of time

Adverbs such as now, still, yesterday, just, finally, and Sunday tell when something occurred. These adverbs of time are part of a category that includes individual words, phrases, and clauses. For example:

INDIVIDUAL WORDS	PHRASES	CLAUSES
finally	during the exam	after the game ended
recently	in the spring	I got on the bus
today	on Monday before	since she arrived here

Adverbs of time can introduce a sentence or follow it.

subject + predicate + adverb of time

He + left for work + at seven.

adverb of time + subject + predicate

At seven + he + left for work.

Recently, I bought a new laptop.

I bought a new laptop recently.

During the exam, Tina began to feel ill.

Tina began to feel ill during the exam.

Before I got on the bus, I realized I had lost my ticket.

I realized I had lost my ticket before I got on the bus.

Exercise

10.1

Using each set of words and phrases provided, write a sentence with the adverb of manner in the appropriate position.

EXAMPLE:

men / drive / carefully / mountains

The men had to drive carefully through the mountains.

1. children / run / school / with joy

2. baritone / sing / better / soprano

3. brother / lounge / lazily / sofa / TV

4. Michael / show / car / with great pride

5. she / act / responsibly / accident

6. woman / mutter / weakly / that / ill

7. professor / congratulate / with a bit of sarcasm

8. eight-year-old / play / beautifully

9. little James / recite / capably / bow

10. Ellen / slap / with rage

Using each adverb of time provided, write two original sentences: one in which the adverb introduces the action, and one in which it follows it.

EXAMPLE:

Recently, I found an old picture of Dad.

I found an old picture of Dad recently.

1. during the storm

a. _____

b. _____

2. yesterday

a. _____

b. _____

3. on the weekend

a. _____

b. _____

4. soon

a. _____

b. _____

5. next Friday

a. _____

b. _____

6. in time

a. _____

b. _____

7. after Paul gets here

a. _____

b. _____

8. in June

a. _____

b. _____

9. last year

a. _____

b. _____

10. before I studied English

a. _____

b. _____

Adverbs of frequency

Adverbs of frequency tell how often something occurs. They can be individual words or phrases. For example:

INDIVIDUAL WORDS	PHRASES
never	at times
sometimes	in the rarest of moments
usually	with great frequency

When an adverb of frequency is an individual word, it tends to stand just before the verb. If it is a phrase, it usually can either introduce the sentence or follow it. Let's look at some example sentences:

We rarely stay out very late.

My sister often invites her friends over to listen to music.

At times, I just want to drop everything and go out.

Mr. Johnson showed up at our door with great regularity.

Adverbs of degree

Adverbs of degree tell to what extent something is done. Some of the most commonly used adverbs of degree are listed here:

adequately	perfectly
almost	practically
entirely	profoundly
extremely	really
greatly	strongly
highly	totally hugely	tremendously
immensely	very moderately	virtually partially

The adverbs in this category are used to modify verbs, adjectives, or other adverbs. The position of the adverb in a sentence is determined by the word it modifies:

◆ Verbs

The children enjoyed the circus immensely.

The lawyer strongly advocated suing the company.

◆ Adjectives

She was an extremely beautiful woman.

Bill had become profoundly depressed.

◆ Adverbs

They sang really badly.

The project was progressing moderately well.

Exercise

10·3

Rewrite the following sentences with an appropriate adverb of frequency.

EXAMPLE:

She spoke with John.

She never spoke with John.

1. We supported our troops fighting overseas.

2. Larry had to work on the weekend.

3. I planned to take art courses at the college.

4. Do you work at the new plant in the suburbs?

5. Martin renews his subscription to this magazine.

6. We drink coffee with breakfast.

7. Did your parents live in Europe?

8. My sister and I baked a cake or cookies.

9. Jim and Ellen went to a dance.

10. Have you thought of becoming a doctor?

Write an original sentence using each adverb of degree and the accompanying verb, adjective, or adverb provided.

EXAMPLE: very strong My cousin Jake is a very strong man.

1. highly emotional _____
2. totally irrelevant _____
3. recommend highly _____
4. immensely proudly _____
5. hugely successful _____
6. weep profoundly _____
7. really stubbornly _____
8. really stubborn _____
9. entirely false _____
10. partially true _____

Adverbs of place

Adverbs of place tell where an action occurs. Some of these adverbs are single words. For example:

abroad anywhere downstairs here

inside somewhere there underground

Other adverbs of place appear in phrase form, particularly in prepositional phrases.

alongside the road
at home in the bedroom

next door on the hearth over there

Let's look at some example sentences:

They lived abroad for five years.

They were working somewhere on a secret project.

Jack was making up the bed in the bedroom.

We spend a lot of time at home.

Using each of the adverb cues provided once, write two original sentences.

EXAMPLE: here / in the garden
They stopped here for a bite to eat.
Dad wanted to take a nap in the garden.

1. there / on the roof

- a. _____
 b. _____

2. outside / next door

- a. _____
 b. _____

3. anywhere / over the mantle

- a. _____
 b. _____

4. upstairs / in a small box

- a. _____
 b. _____

5. underground / beyond the river

- a. _____
 b. _____

Adverbs that make a comment

Some adverbs make a comment on a situation. They identify the speaker's or writer's viewpoint or opinion on the subject matter of a sentence. Some commonly used comment or viewpoint adverbs follow:

bravely carelessly certainly clearly cleverly confidentially definitely disappointingly foolishly presumably seriously simply stupidly surely technically theoretically thoughtfully truthfully generously happily kindly naturally obviously personally unbelievably undoubtedly (un)fortunately (un)luckily wisely wrongly

When adverbs of this category are used in context, they show the degree to which the speaker or writer agrees or disagrees with a statement. These adverbs can also show disapproval or skepticism. Let's look at some example sentences:

She clearly has no understanding of the topic.
Theoretically, the project should be completed by May.
Wisely, he chose to drop out of the competition.

The speaker has doubts about her understanding.
The speaker is skeptical that the completion date can be met.
The speaker believes the decision to drop out was a good one.

Some adverbs of this type are placed only at the beginning of the sentence. For example:

Confidentially, I think that Martha is being dishonest.
Presumably, the storm is going to let up and we'll be able to leave.
Happily, the child was found unharmed.

Certain of these adverbs can either introduce the sentence or follow the subject. For example:

Naturally, I thought I had done the right thing.
I naturally thought I had done the right thing.
Certainly, Jean understands why you can't go tonight.
Jean certainly understands why you can't go tonight.
Technically, that's wrong.
That's technically wrong.

Be careful with the adverb happily. It is both an adverb of manner and an adverb of viewpoint or comment. If it tells how something is done, it is an adverb of manner.

Tina spoke happily about her engagement.

If it expresses a point of view, suggesting that the subject matter of the sentence is good news, then the adverb is one of viewpoint or comment.

Happily, the man found his wallet and could buy the tickets.

Rewrite each of the following sentences twice: first placing the adverb provided in parentheses at the beginning of the sentence, and then placing it after the subject.

EXAMPLE: (obviously) The blizzard is worse than expected.
Obviously, the blizzard is worse than expected.
The blizzard obviously is worse than expected.

1. (surely) You don't believe his story.

- a. _____
 b. _____

2. (undoubtedly) The man is a genius.

- a. _____
 b. _____

3. (personally) I feel I can place my trust in this woman.

- a. _____
 b. _____

4. (presumably) Mr. Lee has a wonderful new job in Boston.

- a. _____
 b. _____

5. (cleverly) Daniel found a seat next to the pretty girl from Korea.

- a. _____
 b. _____

Adverb placement in a sentence

Adverbs tend to be placed in a specific position in a sentence. This is merely a tendency, however, and some adverbs are more flexible and make sense in more than one position. In some cases, the position of an adverb in a sentence is determined by what element is stressed or by the actual function of the adverb. Also, some adverbs can be used in more than one way. For example:

Disappointingly, Mark received another bad grade.	adverb of viewpoint introducing the sentence
Bill disappointingly missed making a goal.	adverb of viewpoint following the subject
She gave a disappointingly weak response.	adverb of degree modifying an adjective

Following are some general rules for determining adverb placement in a sentence:

- ◆ Adverbs of manner, adverbs of time, and adverbs of place stand after the verb or the predicative expression at the end of the sentence.

subject + verb + manner/time/place

The boys stared glumly at the scoreboard. adverb of manner

They'll arrive in town next week. adverb of time

Phillip stood near the door. adverb of place

- ◆ Adverbs of frequency are placed before the main verb in a sentence.

subject + frequency + verb

Jack often visits us when he's in town.

She rarely spoke of life in her village.

An exception is that if the sentence contains an auxiliary verb, an adverb of frequency usually follows that auxiliary.

Maria has never been to Canada.

My dad will usually cry at a sad movie.

You should regularly floss your teeth.

Also, if the verb to be is used as the main verb of a clause, an adverb of frequency will follow that verb.

She was seldom in class.

You are always the best musician in the orchestra.

- ◆ Adverbs of degree follow the verb or verb phrase they modify—but if they modify an adjective or another adverb, they are placed before them.

The good news about Dad's health pleased them tremendously. modified verb

He had a profoundly infected wound. modified adjective

They had to drive really slowly. modified adverb

- ◆ Adverbs of viewpoint or comment commonly begin the sentence—though, some can follow the subject. For example:

viewpoint + subject + verb

Wisely, they left the stalled car and walked to town.

Undoubtedly, you have no confidence in yourself.

subject + viewpoint + verb

She clearly has no intention of paying me back.

Bob obviously overslept again.

The explanations of adverb placement in this chapter have been qualified by words such as commonly used or tendency, because there can be exceptions to the rules. The rules are not finite.

One frequent exception to the rules is the placement of an adverb at the beginning of a sentence, rather than in its normal position, for emphasis. For example:

Now you finally come up with an answer to my question!

Rarely do I ever watch such television programs!

Sometimes I think about my days back on the farm.

Write original sentences using both of the adverb cues provided. Note that one adverb in each pair is an adverb of viewpoint or comment, while the other is of another type.

EXAMPLE: confidentially / really Confidentially, I think that's a really poor idea.

1. clearly / usually _____
2. foolishly / last week _____
3. bravely / very _____
4. fortunately / sometimes _____
5. personally / really _____

Rewrite each sentence that follows three times, using the three adverbs provided in parentheses in their appropriate positions.

EXAMPLE: She bought a pretty sweater. (naturally / on Monday / really)

Naturally, she bought a pretty sweater.

She bought a pretty sweater on Monday.

She bought a really pretty sweater.

6. I ran to the window and saw Bill. (quickly / fortunately / suddenly)
 - a. _____
 - b. _____
 - c. _____
7. Juanita destroyed the strange object. (wisely / immediately / very)
 - a. _____
 - b. _____
 - c. _____
8. They carried her into the living room. (after she fainted / carefully / around five o'clock)
 - a. _____
 - b. _____
 - c. _____
9. The old men sat around the little table. (presumably / extremely / silently)
 - a. _____
 - b. _____
 - c. _____
10. Her left leg is broken. (seriously / once again / in two places)
 - a. _____
 - b. _____
 - c. _____

Present and past participles

•11•

There are two types of participles: present participles and past participles. Both types can be used as modifiers.

Present participles

A present participle is formed by adding -ing to the infinitive of a verb while dropping the particle word to:

to go → going
to help → helping to be → being to develop → developing

Although present participles are used attributively, they have a special characteristic: they can modify a noun by standing either before it or after it. If the present participle stands after the noun, it is in a sense an elliptical relative clause. Here is an illustration:

The weeping girl was Tim's sister.
The girl weeping was Tim's sister.

The girl who was weeping was Tim's sister.

The spinning top made me dizzy.
The top spinning made me dizzy.

The top that was spinning made me dizzy.

The running boys were scared.
The boys running were scared.

The boys who were running were scared.

Present participles can also introduce a phrase that modifies a noun or pronoun in a sentence. For example:

Running down the hill, Jim tripped and sprained his ankle.
Sitting alone in the dark, she suddenly had a feeling of dread.

Phrases or clauses that modify the noun or pronoun they precede can indicate a new tense or a modified meaning by use of an auxiliary. Let's look at some examples:

Being accused of a crime , Jim was forced to be interrogated.	present passive
Having been invited to the party , Juan went out to buy a new suit.	past passive
Being able to sing well , Nancy was asked to join the choir.	modal auxiliary

Present participles cannot be used predicatively, but they can be used to modify a noun in the predicate. Present participles in a predicate can stand before the noun they modify or after the noun they modify, and the verb in the sentence can be either a linking verb or a transitive verb. In both usages, they are replacements for relative clauses.

First let's look at some examples of present participles that stand before the noun they modify in the predicate:

This is a developing story.	story that is developing
The woman observed the slowly moving caravan.	caravan that is moving slowly
That was a frightening experience!	experience that was frightening

With the phrase there is/there are, the modifying present participle stands after the noun. The phrase there is/there are can be in any tense. For example:

There really was no story developing .	story that was developing
There is a storm brewing .	storm that is brewing
There will be three trained bears dancing .	bears that will be dancing

When the verb in the sentence is transitive, this same position following the noun is possible for a present participle.

They were recording the professor speaking.
 The doctor watched her eyes rapidly blinking.
 I felt my heart beating wildly in my chest.

Exercise

11.1

Fill in each blank with an appropriate present-participle modifier.

EXAMPLE: The pouting boy had just been punished.

- _____ hyenas are native to Africa.
- My parents want a new _____ table.
- All night long, I listened to the old clock _____.
- She said nothing _____.
- The boys _____ over the soccer ball are bullies.
- _____, my uncle collected a variety of artworks.
- What a large _____ vessel!
- _____ clouds moved swiftly overhead.
- There won't be another train _____ soon.
- There were numerous rumors _____.

Past participles

Past participles can be used as adjectives and are in the same verbal form as the perfect tenses, but the auxiliary have is omitted.

to break → broken to write → written to arrest → arrested to deliver → delivered

In many cases, past participles—just like present participles—can modify a noun by standing before it or after it. When it stands after the noun, the past participle is like an elliptical relative clause, but the verb in that clause is in the passive voice. Let's look at some examples:

The arrested man tried to flee.
The man arrested tried to flee.	The man who was arrested tried to flee.
The stolen money was retrieved.
The money stolen was retrieved.	The money that was stolen was retrieved.
The burned books were in Latin.
The books burned were in Latin.	The books that were burned were in Latin.

Past participles can also introduce a phrase that modifies a noun or pronoun in a sentence. For example:

Discovered in southern Mexico, the village had apparently been abandoned years ago.
Shaken by the clap of thunder, they left the tent and went in the house.

In contrast to present participles, past participles can be used as predicative adjectives after linking verbs.

The clock was broken, so Tim placed it in a box in the attic.
Their vacation plans were ruined.
His voice finally sounded rested.

This usage, which often resembles the passive voice, is further addressed in Chapter 17, which discusses the passive voice in detail.

Past participles can also be used to modify a noun in the predicate. Past participles in the predicate can stand before the noun they modify or after the noun they modify, and the verb in the sentence can be either a linking verb or a transitive verb. In both usages, they are replacements for relative clauses.

First let's look at some examples of past participles that stand before the noun they modify:

The athlete has a well- developed body.	body that was well developed
This is a completed version of the story.	version that was completed
Her frightened face told me everything.	face that was frightened

With the phrase there is/there are, the modifying past participle stands after the noun. The phrase there is/there are can be used in any tense. For example:

There was a message stuffed in his pocket.
Will there be new invitations sent out?
At that tragic moment, there wasn't a single word spoken.

Fill in each blank with an appropriate past-participle modifier.

EXAMPLE: Each written exercise is worth ten points.

1. _____ documents are of no help.
2. The damaged clock is now _____.
3. _____, James turned away and began to sob.
4. I think the meat loaf smells _____.
5. Who took the _____ garments from this room?
6. I have the valley _____ on this map.
7. _____, Susan let out a little shriek and then smiled in embarrassment.
8. A _____ pot never boils. (proverb)
9. Where is the little boy _____ alone in the park?
10. This is the manuscript _____ in that old chest.

Using each verb cue provided, write two original sentences: one with the verb cue written as a present participle, and one with the verb cue written as a past participle.

EXAMPLE: read

This reading material is meant for adults.

The previously read statement is full of exaggerations.

1. write

a. _____

b. _____

2. break

a. _____

b. _____

3. charge

a. _____

b. _____

4. leak

a. _____

b. _____

Follow the same directions, but write one original sentence with an introductory phrase that modifies a noun or pronoun and is introduced by a present participle.

EXAMPLE: follow

Following the paths of the maze, the man became disoriented.

5. lie

6. hope

7. drive

Follow the same directions, but write one original sentence with an introductory phrase that modifies a noun or pronoun and is introduced by a past participle.

EXAMPLE: develop

Developed for the space program, this ceramic is now in public use.

8. place

9. beat

10. drive

Adverbs and participles

Since participles can be used as adjectives, and adjectives can be modified by adverbs, it is logical that adverbs can modify participles. This is true of both present and past participles. However, because participles are derived from verbs, only those adverbs that can modify a verb can also modify a participle. Let's look at a few examples with present participles:

He speaks slowly.
The satellite orbits regularly.
She stared coldly at him.

I listened to the man speaking slowly.
They observed the regularly orbiting satellite.
The woman staring coldly at him was Jane.

Adverbs modify past participles in a similar manner, but the verb that becomes a past-participle modifier is in the passive voice. For example:

The boy was rarely punished.
The words had been neatly printed.
It was calculated properly.

The rarely punished boy was arrogant.
The neatly printed words were addressed to Santa.
He showed the figures calculated properly.

Since adverbs can be prepositional phrases, prepositional phrases can also modify present and past participles used as modifiers. This occurs most frequently when the adverb modifier follows the noun or pronoun it modifies.

The man standing near the door isn't one of our guests.
Some qualified for the job were a bit too young.

Exercise

11.4

Add an appropriate adverb that modifies the present or past participle in each phrase that follows.

EXAMPLE: the slowly spinning top; a window shattered in the storm

1. the _____ grazing cattle
2. the _____ twirling dancers
3. someone behaving _____
4. a shed leaning _____ to one side
5. the _____ beaming parents
6. a _____ tuned instrument
7. the _____ copied text
8. a chair propped _____
9. the _____ mixed paint
10. words _____ spoken

Exercise

11.5

Write original sentences using the following participles and phrases as modifiers.

EXAMPLE: running along the bank of the river
Running along the bank of the river, Tim slipped and fell in the water.

1. fully rested

2. giggling

3. merrily strumming on an old banjo

4. having been voted president

5. collected over the years

6. suggested by a professor

7. sputtering nervously

8. driven to madness

9. having to remain at home

10. vigorously bubbling

Using infinitives

In order to write effectively in English, it is necessary to understand some important verb forms. One of them is the infinitive.

Verbs that combine with infinitives

Infinitives are considered the base form of a verb. They are composed of the verb and the particle word to: to look, to run, to see, and so on. When used as verbs, infinitives can follow certain auxiliaries.

auxiliary + infinitive to be able + to see

For example:

I am supposed to be home by ten.

You ought to hurry.

She has to wait.

Also, certain other words often require an infinitive usage after them and sometimes are preceded by a noun or pronoun object. Some of the most commonly used ones are listed here:

agree	fail	prepare
appear	forget	pretend
ask	hesitate	promise
beg	hope	refuse
care	learn	regret
claim	manage	remember

Let's look at their use in a few example sentences:

She agreed to work on a solution with me.

I hesitate to think about what might happen.

Did you ask Tim to sign up for the same class?

Functions of an infinitive

When an infinitive is used as a verbal, it is functioning not as a verb but as a different part of speech. Infinitives can be used as nouns, adjectives, and adverbs.

When an infinitive is used as a noun, it occurs in some of the structures of all other nouns: the subject of a sentence, the direct object of a sentence, a predicate nominative, the object of a preposition, an appositive, and a modifier.

Subject of a sentence

Let's look at some infinitives used as subjects. Note that infinitives as subjects can be part of a phrase.

subject infinitive + verb + complement

To study in Europe is a dream of mine.

To become a leader was her greatest ambition.

To learn a foreign language is part of a good education.

Exercise

12.1

Complete each sentence that follows by filling in the blank with an appropriate phrase for the infinitive provided.

EXAMPLE: To work for this company is really a privilege.

1. To prepare _____ will take a long time.
2. To attend _____ should be your goal.
3. To sleep _____ will not be tolerated.
4. To play _____ is just a dream of hers.
5. To die _____ was the young warrior's wish.
6. To camp _____ gave us a lot of pleasure.
7. To serve _____ became his destiny.
8. To develop _____ has been a difficult task.
9. To climb _____ had become her obsession.
10. To write _____ is not as easy as it sounds.

Direct object of a sentence

Infinitives can appear as direct objects as follows:

subject + transitive verb + direct object infinitive

She loved to write poetry.

I finally arranged to study abroad.

He won't attempt to climb that mountain again.

Remember that some auxiliaries are followed by an infinitive that does not include the particle word to. For example: He must run. They can sing. Following the verb to help, the same thing occurs with infinitives that are used as direct objects. Let's look at an example:

Can you help lift the sofa?

Can you help to lift the sofa?

Complete each sentence by filling in the blank with an appropriate phrase following the infinitive provided as a direct object.

EXAMPLE: John hated to waste time at the mall.

1. Do you want to wait _____?
2. The girls attempted to hide _____.
3. Mark often forgot to lock _____.
4. Please help me find _____.
5. Jake wanted to paint _____.

Now complete each of the following sentences with an original infinitive phrase.

6. Jim and Jerry helped me _____.
7. I really need _____.
8. Who wanted _____?
9. Don't try _____.
10. Did you remember _____?

Complete each of the following sentences appropriately, using the infinitive phrase provided as the subject of the sentence.

EXAMPLE: To play the piano is a goal of mine.

1. To live a clean and honorable life _____.
2. To visit Rome _____.
3. To become rich _____.
4. To repair racing cars _____.
5. To travel into space _____.
6. To study physics in Japan _____.
7. To end pollution _____.
8. To become a citizen _____.
9. To earn my degree _____.
10. To see my mother healthy again _____.

Passive-voice infinitives can be used in the same way as other infinitives. For example:

To be elected to high office was her goal.
John's only wish is to be respected by his peers.

Predicate nominative

It's also common for some infinitives to function as a predicate nominative. For instance:

Her first duty was to protect her children.
My goal is to be appointed chairman of the committee.
Is your purpose here to ruin this project or to help improve it?

Object of a preposition

Likewise, infinitive phrases can sometimes be the object of a preposition. For instance:

I want nothing but to see my children happy.
Barry learned nothing in the class except to cheat.

Appositive

When an infinitive phrase is used as an appositive, it can appear in either one of two positions in a sentence: immediately after the word or phrase that it explains or describes, or at the end of a sentence that begins with an impersonal it. Here are examples of the first type of apposition:

My goal, to study in Mexico, is about to become a reality.
Mary's suggestion, to collect aluminum cans along the road, was quickly rejected.
The notion, to dig a tunnel under the ocean, is preposterous.

An appositive at the end of a sentence is sometimes called a delayed appositive. It is used to describe the impersonal subject of a sentence it. For example:

It hurt me a lot to see her with another man.
It would give us great pleasure to see you win that prize.
It seemed naive to hope for peace at this time.

A delayed infinitive can be identified by testing it as the subject of the sentence in place of it. If the infinitive subject of the sentence make sense, it is a delayed infinitive.

To see her with another man hurt me a lot.
To see you win that prize would give us great pleasure.
To hope for peace at this time seemed naive.

Using the infinitive phrase provided, write three original sentences: one with the phrase used as a predicate nominative, one with the phrase used as an appositive, and one with the phrase used as a delayed appositive.

EXAMPLE:

to visit Alaska

His only desire was to visit Alaska.

Jane's goal, to visit Alaska, would become a reality.

It became impossible to visit Alaska.

1. to marry Jack

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

2. to become a famous actor

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

3. to understand grammar better

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

4. to run in the marathon

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

5. not to become conceited

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

Modifier

Used as modifiers, infinitives can act as both adjectives and adverbs. When an infinitive modifies a noun or pronoun, it is used as an adjective.

Jill is the only girl in our class to remain single .	modifies girl
Mr. Lee is the one to see about getting a job here .	modifies one
This is the only road to take .	modifies road

When an infinitive acts as an adverb, it modifies a verb and usually answers the question why? You can test this adverbial usage by adding the phrase in order to to the infinitive. If the phrase makes sense, it is used adverbially. Let's look at some example sentences:

Jonathan came to help with our move into the new apartment .	in order to help
Ms. Smythe phoned to apologize .	in order to apologize
The applicant is waiting to see the boss .	in order to see the boss

Exercise

12·5

Complete each of the following sentences with any appropriate infinitive modifier—an adjective for a noun or pronoun, an adverb for a verb.

EXAMPLE: Frank is really a man to be admired.

1. The little boy cried _____.
2. The documents _____ are on my desk.
3. Her parents came along _____.
4. Ms. Garcia is the person _____.
5. The guard gave the signal _____.
6. They decided to stop at a motel _____.
7. We came by way of another street _____.
8. Is there a better way _____?
9. She applied for a job _____.
10. The issue _____ is how we find enough money for a new house.

Write an original sentence using each of the phrases provided.

EXAMPLE:

person to watch

The only person to watch is the one with experience.

1. to enjoy the music

2. to be supported

3. to locate

4. to applaud

5. to be contradicted

6. to spell

7. to forgive

8. to be forgiven

9. to eliminate

10. to judge

In the sentences that follow, change the underlined word or phrase to any two appropriate infinitives or infinitive phrases.

EXAMPLE:

A study session can be boring.

To read Latin texts can be boring.

To paint a white wall can be boring.

1. She arrived early from work.

a. _____

b. _____

2. Her idea, a network of computers, was only slowly accepted.

a. _____

b. _____

3. Music gradually became Tom's passion.

a. _____

b. _____

4. There was nothing to do but this.

a. _____

b. _____

5. My only choice was total capitulation.

a. _____

b. _____

Using gerunds

Another important verbal is the gerund. It is formed just like a present participle: the suffix -ing is added to the infinitive, while the particle word to is omitted.

to go → going
to sing → singing

Present participles, as opposed to gerunds, are used to form the progressive tenses and as modifiers:

- ◆ Progressive tense showing an incomplete action

I am studying for a big exam.
She was planning on a vacation to Ireland.

- ◆ Modifier

The swirling waters meant danger ahead.
The man following us looked sinister.

Functions of the gerund

Gerunds have a different use in sentences. They act as nouns, and they can be part of any grammatical structure that a noun can: subject, predicate nominative, object, modifier, possessive, object of a preposition, or appositive.

When a gerund is used as the subject of a sentence, it can be a single word or part of a phrase. For example:

Spinning is a popular exercise at my health club.
Working for the railroad meant job security.

The same is true if the gerund or gerund phrase is in the predicate nominative.

Jim's passion soon became singing.
Their daily chore was washing the dishes after dinner.

Using the phrase provided to form a gerund, write one sentence with the gerund serving as the subject, and then write a second sentence with the same gerund serving as the predicate nominative.

EXAMPLE:

to have a party

Having a party can be a lot of work.

Her only thought was having a party for him.

1. to borrow some money

a. _____

b. _____

2. to collect stamps

a. _____

b. _____

3. to travel around New England

a. _____

b. _____

4. to complain

a. _____

b. _____

5. to solve her money problems

a. _____

b. _____

6. to swear

a. _____

b. _____

7. to jog in the park

a. _____

b. _____

8. to be on the team

a. _____

b. _____

9. to cry

a. _____

b. _____

10. to avoid an accident

a. _____

b. _____

Gerunds can be used as direct objects following many verbs. Just about any verb that can have a noun or pronoun direct object can also have a gerund as its direct object. Let's look at some examples:

Noun object

My cousin hated classical music.
Did Mom mention Bill's promotion?
June loved the art museum.

Gerund object

My cousin hated sleeping on the sofa.
Did Mom mention meeting the mayor?
June loved baking.

It is possible to use a gerund as an indirect object, but that kind of structure can sound awkward and occurs only rarely. For example:

You have strong legs. You should give running another chance.

Placement of not

You have to use some caution when negating a sentence that contains a gerund serving as a direct object, because the meaning of the sentence is altered by the placement of the adverb not. If you negate the verb, the action of the sentence is negated. If you negate the gerund, you are suggesting an alternative to the meaning of the gerund. When you negate a gerund, the adverb not should be placed directly in front of the gerund: not singing, not following, and so on. Let's look at specific examples showing the difference of meaning that occurs by the placement of not:

Positive	I'm considering driving to Denver.
Negated verb	I'm not considering driving to Denver.	I have no plan to go to Denver.
Negated object	I'm considering not driving to Denver.	Instead, I'm thinking of flying there.
Positive	John likes talking on the phone.
Negated verb	John doesn't like talking on the phone.	He prefers talking face-to-face.
Negated object	John likes not talking on the phone.	He's enjoying avoiding his former habit of talking on the phone.
Positive	She preferred wearing business attire.
Negated verb	She didn't prefer wearing business attire.	Someone misunderstood what she preferred to wear.
Negated object	She preferred not wearing business attire.	Her preference was casual attire.

Using the phrases provided, first write a positive sentence with the gerund serving as a direct object. Then rewrite the sentence with the gerund negated by not.

EXAMPLE:

watching the game

Jim mentioned watching the game today.Jim mentioned not watching the game today.

1. washing the car

a. _____

b. _____

2. vacationing in Florida

a. _____

b. _____

3. visiting Uncle Charlie

a. _____

b. _____

4. getting up at dawn

a. _____

b. _____

5. spending the weekend at the cabin

a. _____

b. _____

Gerunds versus present participles

When gerunds are used as modifiers, remember that they are nouns used as modifiers. There is a difference between a gerund and how it modifies, on the one hand, and a present participle and how it modifies. Here's how it breaks down:

◆ Present participle

The man planning the party is my uncle.The scratching dog has fleas.The baking cakes smell delicious.the man who is planning = present participlethe dog that is scratching = present participlethe cakes that are baking = present participle

◆ Gerund

The planning department met at four.*the department that does the planning (noun)
= gerund*

That scratching noise is very annoying.

*the noise sounds like scratching (noun) =
gerund*

This is a baking dish.

a dish for baking (noun) = gerund

Exercise

13·3

Add the suffix -ing to the verb provided, and write any appropriate sentence using that word as a present participle. Then write another appropriate sentence using that word as a gerund.

EXAMPLE:

to take

We are taking a vacation to Montana.

Taking final exams is stressful.

1. to hike

a. _____

b. _____

2. to require

a. _____

b. _____

3. to suggest

a. _____

b. _____

4. to employ

a. _____

b. _____

5. to imitate

a. _____

b. _____

Follow the same directions, but now write sentences that use the present participle and the gerund as modifiers.

6. to investigate

a. _____

b. _____

7. to train

a. _____

b. _____

Possessive constructions

Most singular English nouns form their possessive by adding an apostrophe plus s to the end of the word; for example, Jim's, the girl's. If the noun is plural, those positions are generally switched: the apostrophe follows the s; for example, the boys', the parents'. In addition, the possessive can often be formed with the preposition of; for example, of the boy, of the university.

When a gerund is used in the possessive, it is possible to add an apostrophe plus s, but it is far more common to make the gerund the object of the preposition of. For example:

Possible

the burning's effect
the drowning's cause

More likely the effect of the burning the cause of the drowning

Since gerunds tend to describe something inanimate, the greater tendency is to use the preposition of.

Prepositions with gerunds

A long list of prepositions can be used with gerunds. Some of these prepositions are often paired with specific verbs. For instance, the correct usage is to be interested "in" and not to or from or any other preposition.

Some verbs and adjectives are used primarily with the preposition for:

grateful for to vouch for responsible for

Some are used with the preposition of:

capable of guilty of scared of

Some are used with the preposition to:

to commit to to connect to to dedicate to

Some are used with the preposition with:

to bore with to finish with to satisfy with

These are just a few examples of the large number of verbs that are accompanied by specific prepositions. Many of them can be used to form a prepositional phrase with a gerund. For example:

to be satisfied with the training to be tired of waiting exhausted from working to be interested in sailing to think about studying sick of struggling

When a gerund is placed in the position of an appositive, it functions like any other appositive: it gives further meaning about or describes its antecedent. A gerund acting as an appositive always stands directly after its antecedent. Unlike the case with infinitives, gerunds cannot be used as delayed appositives. For example:

The next step, planning for the new school year, will be headed by Jean.
His problem, worrying about money, can be solved by a better job.
Jane's reaction, laughing at my suggestion, was a real insult.

Using the phrase provided, write an original sentence with the gerund serving as the object of a preposition. Then write a second sentence with the gerund used as an appositive.

EXAMPLE:

about the damming of the river

The editorial was about the damming of the river.

This project, the damming of the river, has many dangers.

1. of being your assistant

a. _____

b. _____

2. from stopping too suddenly

a. _____

b. _____

3. to sunbathing and swimming

a. _____

b. _____

4. in razing the old church

a. _____

b. _____

5. by playing with matches

a. _____

b. _____

Infinitives and gerunds

Infinitives can be used as nouns, and gerunds are always used as nouns. In many cases, therefore, it is possible for infinitives (used as nouns) and gerunds to replace one another in sentences, with little or no change in the meaning of the sentence.

subject + verb + infinitive

subject + verb + gerund

Let's look at some example sentences:

I love to swim in a cool lake.

She prefers to use her own money.

Did you start to lose weight?

I love swimming in a cool lake.

She prefers using her own money.

Did you start losing weight?

This mutual replacement of infinitives and gerunds does not occur with all verbs. Some of the commonly used verbs that can be followed by either an infinitive or a gerund are to begin, to cease, to continue, to dread, to hate, to like, to love, to neglect, and to propose.

Some verbs can be followed only by infinitives. For example:

Did you decide to buy the car?

Buying cannot be used.

She wants to help your family.

Helping cannot be used.

See Chapter 12 regarding verbs that require infinitive usage.

There are other verbs that can be followed by either an infinitive or a gerund, but these combinations sometimes carry different meanings. Verbs of this type include to attempt, to forget, to hope, to mean, to regret, to remember, and to try. Let's look at some of these verbs in sentences and how their meanings vary depending on whether the infinitive or the gerund is used:

Bill forgot to park in the garage.

Bill parked his car somewhere else.

Bill forgot parking in the garage.

Bill parked in the garage, but he forgot that he did.

I remember to buy groceries.

I don't forget to buy groceries.

I remember buying groceries.

I'm confused, but there is a memory of buying groceries.

Try to raise your hand.

See if you can move your injured hand.

Try raising your hand.

The teacher will call on you if you raise your hand.

Exercise

13.5

Complete the following sentences twice: first with an infinitive, and then with a gerund wherever possible. If a gerund cannot be used, enter "NA" (i.e., not applicable). Be aware that there may be a difference in meaning between the infinitive and the gerund.

EXAMPLE: We need to start to raise money / raising money.

1. I would love _____.
2. She always remembers _____.
3. We need to begin _____.
4. Tim sometimes hated _____.
5. Did you always like _____?
6. Don't forget _____.
7. You should try _____.
8. The judge neglected _____.
9. You must immediately cease _____.
10. The little boy continued _____.

Idioms

Idioms are phrases or sentences that cannot be translated literally from one language to another. They usually comprise common words used in an unexpected way, and that often results in confusion when the student of English is not aware that the words are used idiomatically.

ordinary words + unexpected usage → idiom

Consider the following examples and what the sentences mean—not what the individual words mean:

Keep an eye on that for me.
You're pulling my leg!
You can bet your bottom dollar that he's right.

*Watch that for me.
You're joking with me!
You can be absolutely sure that he's right.*

The appropriate use of idioms and other expressions that carry an unexpected meaning can be an asset in writing good sentences. Although they require care in how they're employed, they can make sentences more interesting by providing a casual tone to a text and even a little fun.

Parts of speech used in idioms

It is not just a single part of speech that can be used idiomatically. Various parts of speech occur in idioms. This section outlines some commonly used idioms based on the part of speech they feature.

Nouns

Many nouns are used idiomatically, and when they are, either their meaning or their function in a sentence is changed. For example:

beeline She made a beeline She went directly to the library.
 for the library.

Both the subject and the object of the preposition in this idiom can change: Tom made a beeline for the exit.

bone I have a bone to pick I need to discuss a problem with you.
 with you.

Again, both the subject, the object of the preposition, and the tense of the verb in this idiom can change: She has a bone to pick with her boyfriend.

card Tom is a real card.

Tom is very funny.

Only the subject of this idiom can change. The subjects tend to refer to males: Her husband is a real card.

dog His business soon went to the dogs.

His business soon was ruined.

Only the subject of this idiom can change.

tongue The answer is on the tip of my tongue.

I can almost remember the answer.

The subject of the sentence, the possessive, and the tense can change in this idiom: The man's name was on the tip of her tongue.

water You're in hot water now!

You're in a lot of trouble now!

Only the subject of this idiom can change.

Verbs

Let's turn to some verbs that are used idiomatically:

eat He had to eat his (own) words.

He was wrong and had to admit to it.

Only the subject and accompanying possessive of this idiom can change.

feel Do you feel like going out for pizza?

Do you have a desire to go out for pizza?

The subject of this idiom can change. The phrase feel like should be followed by a gerund: Did they feel like coming to my party?

keep You have to keep a stiff upper lip.

You have to be brave.

Only the subject of this idiom can change.

paint The winning team painted the town red.

The winning team had an evening of fun (and drinking).

Only the subject of this idiom can change.

Adjectives

Here are some adjectives that are used idiomatically:

better You (had) better be home on time.

A warning: Be home on time.

The subject of the sentence and the verb phrase that follows (had) better can change: We better stay home tonight.

fishy Your story sounds fishy (to me).

Your story sounds false (to me).

The subject and the optional prepositional phrase can be changed in this idiom: His explanation sounded fishy to the judge.

hot That's a lot of hot air!

That sounds like a lie or an exaggeration!

Only the subject of this idiom can change: His story is a lot of hot air!

red	These forms are just (a lot of) red tape .	These forms are just a lot of complicated (governmental) procedures.
-----	---	---

This idiom can be used after the phrase a lot of or as a predicate nominative.

well	Our neighbors are quite well off .	Our neighbors are quite wealthy.
------	---	---

This idiom can be used attributively but is most frequently used predicatively: Is John really so well off?

It is common to omit the word had from the expression had better. For example:

We had better check the time of our flight.
We better check the time of our flight.

Prepositions

Next, let's look at some prepositions that are used idiomatically:

about	I was about to call him, when he arrived.	I was ready to call him, when he arrived.
-------	--	--

This meaning of about is preceded by a form of to be and followed by infinitive phrases: Jane was about to get into bed, when the phone rang.

from	You'd better start counting from scratch .	You'd better start counting from the beginning.
------	---	--

This idiom can be used in most sentences as a replacement for from the beginning.

in	Mary said her sister is in the family way .	Mary said her sister is pregnant.
----	--	--

Only the subject of this idiom can change.

on	My brother is always on the go .	My brother is always in a hurry (or busy).
----	---	---

Only the subject of this idiom can change.

under	I heard him say something under his breath .	I heard him say something in a whisper.
-------	---	--

This idiom always tells how something is said.

Change the underlined word or phrase in each sentence that follows to the corresponding idiom previously illustrated.

EXAMPLE: Jane didn't know she was pregnant in the family way

1. My cousin is always joking with me.

2. We were ready to leave, when our neighbor dropped by.

3. I always thought the Johnsons were so wealthy.

4. I really don't have a desire to go out tonight.

5. His reason for his behavior is just an exaggeration.

6. You can be absolutely sure that this stock will go up next week.

7. Don't stay out late.

8. I'm going to check the list again from the beginning.

9. I'm sick of all these governmental procedures!

10. One of my nephews is really funny.

Write two appropriate completions to each of the following sentences containing idioms.

EXAMPLE: _____ in the family way.

Mary knew she was in the family way.

Bill asked his wife whether she is in the family way.

1. _____ under her breath.

a. _____

b. _____

2. You never feel like _____.

a. _____

b. _____

3. I had better not _____.

a. _____

b. _____

4. _____ is on the tip of my tongue.

a. _____

b. _____

5. The young woman was about _____.

a. _____

b. _____

6. _____ red tape.

a. _____

b. _____

7. _____ to eat his (her/my) own words.

a. _____

b. _____

Write an original sentence with each of the idiomatic phrases provided.

1. well off

2. hot air

3. from scratch

4. fishy

5. a bone to pick

6. keep a stiff upper lip

7. feel like

8. in hot water

9. (had) better

10. go to the dogs

Special words and phrases

Nearly every language features “little words” or “short phrases” that are added to sentences for emphasis or to give a particular quality to a phrase. Look at the following two sentences. The only difference between the two is the final prepositional phrase in the second sentence:

I don't care.

I don't care in the least.

The addition of the phrase in the least changes the tone of the sentence from casual to emphatic and with a hint of anger. This same prepositional phrase modifies other sentences in a similar way. For example:

I'm not interested in that.
I don't believe you.
I'm not aware of that.

I'm not interested in that in the least.
I don't believe you in the least.
I'm not in the least aware of that.

This section highlights other words and phrases that modify the meanings of sentences.

At all

The two little words at all when added to a negative sentence emphasize the degree of negativity. It is the adverb not that is modified by this phrase. With linking verbs, the phrase at all follows the adverb not or another negative word, or it can be placed after the predicate nominative. Let's look at some examples:

I'm not at all pleased by this.
Sarah wasn't at all impressed.
He isn't at all rich.

I'm not pleased at all by this.
Sarah wasn't impressed at all.
He isn't rich at all.

With other verbs, at all tends to be placed after the verb or verb phrase. For example:

Bill wouldn't speak with her at all.
I actually have no opinion about it at all.
He didn't ask about her condition at all.

By the way

The phrase by the way is usually added at the beginning of a sentence, although it sometimes can occur in a medial or final position. It indicates that the speaker or writer doesn't want to forget to mention something. Let's look at some sentences that illustrate this usage:

Bill's team won the trophy. By the way, I'm on that team, too.
By the way, I ran into your brother last night.
I'll be at your party. By the way, do you mind if I bring along Tina?

How about

How about is used to introduce a question that asks whether someone is interested in doing something. Consider this question: Are you interested in going to the movies? It can be restated like this: How about going to the movies? Let's look at a couple more examples:

How about spending some time with Uncle Fred?
How about trying to save a little more money?

Mind

This verb usually means to see after or to tend to. It can also be used to mean to pay strict attention to or to be on guard against. Yet another useful application is its meaning of to care about or to have anything against an idea or action. It is also used to say that someone has the urge or wants to do something. For example:

Do you mind if I sit here?

No, I don't mind.

I wouldn't mind having a nice cold beer right now.

Do you care that I sit here?/Do you have anything against my sitting here?
No, I don't care./No, I have nothing against your sitting here.
I have the urge to have a cold beer right now.

Or so

The phrase or so is a synonym for approximately or about. Compare the following pairs of sentences:

She's approximately thirty years old.	She's thirty years old or so .
The turkey weighed about twenty pounds.	The turkey weighed twenty pounds or so .

Notice that or so is positioned after the quantity it modifies.

Really

The word really can be used in a variety of sentence types. It can serve as an adverb that means as a matter of fact or in reality. It is also commonly used to emphasize certain elements in a sentence, primarily verbs, adjectives, and other adverbs.

♦ Modifying verbs

I don't like that man.	I really don't like that man.
Do you want to buy that old car?	Do you really want to buy that old car?
The men had a lot of fun at the ball game.	The men really had a lot of fun at the ball game.

♦ Modifying adjectives

Sarah bought an expensive dress.	Sarah bought a really expensive dress.
That's a good copy of the map.	That's a really good copy of the map.
John bought some cheap wine.	John bought some really cheap wine.

♦ Modifying other adverbs

Granddad drove carefully.	Granddad drove really carefully.
Did they get up early?	Did they get up really early?
I never understood his motives.	I really never understood his motives.

Should have

The valuable little phrase should have implies that something that occurred was regrettable. In the negative, it suggests that something that occurred was a mistake. The subject of this verb phrase can be most any noun or pronoun:

♦ Positive

You should have called me yesterday.	It's regrettable that you didn't call.
Should I have told her about my illness?	Should I regret that I didn't tell her?
Tom should have married Marie.	It's regrettable that he didn't marry her.

♦ Negative

I shouldn't have spoken to him that way.	It was a mistake to speak to him that way.
They shouldn't have left today.	It was a mistake for them to leave today.
Jane shouldn't have gone out with Joe.	It was a mistake for her to go out with Joe.

Well

The word well has more than one function in English. It is the adverb for the adjective good, and it is the adjective that means healthy and is the opposite of sick. It is also used as an interjection, but because it has idiomatic qualities, it needs to be looked at again.

Well can be used to stall for a little time, often in response to a difficult or uncomfortable comment. For example:

—I expect you in my office in an hour.

—Well, let me check my calendar.

—Can you answer my question?

—Well, let me think about that for a moment.

It also introduces a sentence that expresses surprise. Although surprise can be expressed without the interjection, the addition of well provides emphasis.

Well, I had no idea that you'd be here today.

Well, I certainly didn't expect to get a speeding ticket.

It can also express impatience. Compare the following pairs of sentences:

No interjection

Are you ready?

You're going to be late again.

Interjection indicating impatience

Well, are you ready?

Well, you're going to be late again.

Exercise

14.4

Fill in the blank in each sentence with the word or phrase from the following list that makes the most sense: at all, by the way, how about, mind, or so, really, or should have.

EXAMPLE: She chose a really expensive ring.

1. I'm not happy _____ with the outcome.
2. Do you _____ understand this poem?
3. We _____ asked Aunt Louise for some financial help.
4. Did her brother _____ that you asked her out?
5. _____, it's hard for me to explain.
6. John joined the marines, and, _____, so did I.
7. I think the center of the team is seven feet tall _____.
8. _____ going out for some dinner with me?
9. Professor Smith is a _____ refined gentleman.
10. It's none of your business _____.

Write two original sentences containing each of the words or phrases provided.

1. really

a. _____

b. _____

2. mind

a. _____

b. _____

3. at all

a. _____

b. _____

4. should have

a. _____

b. _____

5. or so

a. _____

b. _____

6. go to the dogs

a. _____

b. _____

7. by the way

a. _____

b. _____

8. how about

a. _____

b. _____

9. well

a. _____

b. _____

10. feel like

a. _____

b. _____

Short responses and interjections

Not all powerful sentences are long. Even short sentences can carry a lot of meaning, especially when they are the response to a question or statement whose meaning is understood in the reply. For instance, the individual words fine and hardly have their own meanings, but they can also stand alone as an elliptical response to a question or statement.

—You'll have to stay home tonight and study.

—Fine.

Fine, I accept the fact that I must stay home and study.

—I suppose you're going to vote for Laura as chairperson.

—Hardly.

Your supposition is hardly correct. I'll vote for Marie.

Short responses

Many individual words and brief phrases can be used as short responses to questions or statements. Consider the following list:

Amazing!
Apparently.
Don't mention it.
Excellent!
For heaven's sake!
Fortunately.
I have no idea.
Impossible.
Incredible.
It can't be (true)!
Naturally.
Not at all.
Obviously.

Of course.
Outstanding!
Really?
Terrific!
That depends.
That's great.
That's hard to believe.
Unbelievable!
Unfortunately, no/not.
What a pity.
What do you mean?
You're kidding/not serious.
You're welcome.

Naturally, words and phrases such as these do not have a singular use. They can respond to numerous questions or statements; likewise, there can be numerous short responses to a single question or statement. Here are examples:

♦ Various statements/same response

—John is a wonderful tennis player.

—Really?

—Does Tim have a new job?

—I have no idea.

—I simply can't afford a vacation now.

—Really?

—Is Mark remarried?

—I have no idea.

◆ Same statement/various responses

—Is your sister back from college?
—Unfortunately, not.
—Mr. Garcia won the lottery!
—Terrific!

—Is your sister back from college?
—Of course.
—Mr. Garcia won the lottery!
—You're kidding!

Exercise

15·1

Respond to the following questions and statements with one of the words or phrases listed in the preceding section.

EXAMPLE: Thanks for helping out with the party.
You're welcome.

1. Do you have to work this Saturday?

2. I really appreciate your support. Thanks.

3. The dog knocked over Mom's new vase.

4. Is winter going to last much longer?

5. Will the new girl be joining us for dinner?

6. My cousin lost his job and can't afford his apartment.

7. Our school's soccer team won first place!

8. Are you interested in working abroad?

9. It seems that the other candidate will win the election.

10. Did the operation go well?

Write an appropriate question or statement for each of the responses provided.

EXAMPLE: Despite some bad grades, you're going to graduate. Excellent!

1. _____ Incredible.
2. _____ That depends.
3. _____ Amazing!
4. _____ What a pity.
5. _____ Apparently.
6. _____ Not at all.
7. _____ What do you mean?
8. _____ Unfortunately, no.
9. _____ Outstanding!
10. _____ For heaven's sake.

Interjections

Interjections are words that are used to express strong emotion. They can appear alone or as part of a sentence. They give a text a casual tone and, therefore, are rarely used in formal writing. Here is a roster of some common interjections:

ah	great	now	there
aha	here	O	well
alas	hurrah	oh	what
bravo	indeed	ouch	why
good	my	see	wow
goodness	no	so	yes

Besides showing emotion as an exclamation, an interjection can also function as a parenthetical word. Its position is most often at the beginning of a sentence or clause, but interjections can sometimes occur elsewhere in a sentence. If an interjection is written by itself, it is most often punctuated with an exclamation point. The examples that follow illustrate how sentences change when an interjection is added to them:

Stand near the piano.

No! Stand near the piano.

a casual command

an abrupt correction to someone standing in the wrong place

That wound looks serious.

Ouch! That wound looks serious.

a casual statement

an expression of sympathy for the injured person

The cold water tastes good.

Ah, the cold water tastes good.

a casual statement

an expression of satisfaction that the person's thirst is being quenched

Most of the interjections listed in this section are self-explanatory. However, some require a little clarification.

We'll start with the difference between ah and aha and proceed alphabetically. The use of ah shows delight or comfort, while the use of aha announces that a truth has been discovered or a secret revealed.

Ah! You spelled that word just right.

Ah, that feels good.

Aha! You're the thief!

Aha! I see you've hidden the map behind this portrait.

Although the word alas sounds somewhat archaic, it is still used in many forms of writing to provide a lofty tone and to express regret or disappointment. It is usually interchangeable with unfortunately.

Alas, despite hours of negotiations, the treaty was not signed.

Their efforts to secure a peace were, alas, a failure.

The normal meaning and use of goodness (decency, honesty, kindness) is lost when that word is used as an interjection. It gives the idea that the speaker or writer is somewhat shocked:

Goodness, that was a close call.

Goodness! Why are you dressed like that?

The possessive my can be used as an interjection, but when it is, it no longer has to do with possession. Rather, it expresses the idea of mild shock or mild delight. For example:

My, that was a harsh thing to say to him.

My, I really like the way you look in that dress.

The adverb now does not describe time when it functions as an interjection. Instead, it means that a suggestion is about to be stated.

Now, start again and play that melody with greater emotion.

Now, let's not argue about that again.

There is a difference between O and oh. The use of O is vocative; it addresses a person or persons and suggests passion or is used in prayer. The interjection oh is used to express sudden emotion or surprise. Many writers use it in place of O.

O Lord! Hear my prayer!

O, all men of goodwill, join me in this crusade.

Oh, I love the evening view over the Grand Canyon.

Oh, I didn't see you standing there.

The verb see has nothing to do with vision when it serves as an interjection. It implies that someone needs to be aware of a situation or that someone has failed to heed a warning.

See, this is how you hem a skirt properly.

See! I told you that you'd ruin that old clock if you wound it too tightly.

When there is used as an interjection, its meaning does not indicate a place. Instead, it points out how something is done or suggests that an unwanted situation has developed.

There, that's the way to slice a turkey breast.

There! You had to go on that hike, and now you have a bad cold!

The word what is used with two different kinds of interjections. One is a question that carries the interrogative meaning of what but with strong emotion. The other does not ask a question but instead exclaims marked disbelief. For example:

What? Tell me that again! I can't believe my ears!

What! It's a lie! The man is a liar!

The interrogative why is no interrogative at all when it is used as an interjection. It says, instead, that something is unbelievable or a contradiction.

Why, there's no such thing as an elf!
Why, you can't really believe that story.

Exercise

15.3

In the space provided, enter an appropriate interjection for the intent of each sentence.

EXAMPLE: My, having dinner out tonight is a dandy idea.

1. _____, look what you've done now!
2. _____, I love the way you give a back massage.
3. _____, you've found your keys. Now we can finally leave.
4. _____! That was an outstanding performance!
5. _____! That must have caused you a lot of pain.
6. _____! Our team has won the championship again!
7. _____! You lied to me, and now you're in a lot of trouble.
8. _____, you want to be a movie star.
9. _____, it's getting late. I had better go home.
10. _____! Your secret has finally been exposed!
11. _____! Don't touch that wire! You'll get a shock!

Exercise

15.4

Write an original sentence with each of the interjections provided.

1. now _____
2. ah _____
3. great _____
4. see _____
5. there _____
6. well _____
7. why _____
8. here _____
9. so _____
10. indeed _____

Antonyms and contrasts

•16•

People often study antonyms as a way of developing vocabulary, but being knowledgeable about antonyms is also an aid in learning to write better sentences. Using pairs of opposites, as well as other words that are not true antonyms but still show a real contrast, can be helpful in developing good sentences.

It is wrong to think that antonyms just describe opposite meanings, such as in the following examples:

John isn't tall but short.

The fish wasn't dead but alive.

Mary wanted to be rich, but she's poor.

Strong contrasts

Illustrating a difference by using contrasting words can help to make a strong point. For instance, instead of just describing someone or something with a single adjective, it is possible to emphasize a quality by employing contrasts. Here is an example:

The villain in the story cannot be described as a good man, for his lying, cheating, and attempts at deception proved him to be the worst among the bad.

You likely are familiar with a variety of antonyms and contrasts. Many are basic to the study of language. Some commonly used pairs of contrasting words are listed here:

all/none	day/night	right/wrong always/never	dirty/clean	send/receive beautiful/ugly	early/late	smart/stupid
before/after	easy/difficult	start/finish
below/above	empty/full	wet/dry
black/white	find/lose	young/old dark/light	often/seldom

Using the following pairs of words, write sentences that make a simple contrast.

EXAMPLE:

long/short

He needed a long rope but found only a short one.

1. easy/difficult

2. empty/full

3. find/lose

4. often/seldom

5. right/wrong

6. send/receive

7. smart/stupid

8. start/finish

9. wet/dry

10. young/old

There are numerous pairs of contrasting words, and most of them can be employed to make a special point in a sentence—a contrast for emphasis. Although the meanings of the individual words may be simple, the effect can be impressive when they're used in this way. For instance, if you use a simple pair of words such as give/take in this manner, you can come up with interesting sentences that go beyond a simple contrast. Here are two examples:

Their neighbor was not known for giving, not of himself nor of his earthly goods; he was infamous, however, for his taking: taking what didn't belong to him, taking away a person's valuable time, and taking the joy out of life.

I gave her all my love, and she took it gladly along with my self-respect and every penny I had saved.

Exercise

16·2

Using each pair of words provided, write a sentence that makes an emphatic point as illustrated in the preceding examples.

1. all/none

2. always/never

3. beautiful/ugly

4. before/after

5. below/above

6. black/white

7. dark/light

8. day/night

9. dirty/clean

10. early/late

Some antonyms describe a more complex or abstract contrast and are therefore somewhat more difficult to use. Words such as absent/present require that you do a bit more thinking when using them in a sentence.

The old woman's physical body was present at the dinner table, but her thoughts and her soul were absent and searching a thousand miles away for the life she had led as a girl.

The following list contains pairs of words that have a more complex or abstract relationship:

abundant/scarce	cruel/kind	imaginary/real accept/refuse	deep/shallow	increase/decrease bitter/sweet	discourage/encourage	outer/inner cheerful/sad	double/single	reward/punishment
combine/separate	drunk/sober	strengthen/weaken
comedy/tragedy	graceful/clumsy	victory/defeat
crooked/straight	guilty/innocent

These pairs of words can be used to make a simple contrast, but because they are more complex or abstract than a pair such as big/little, the effect in a sentence can be a loftier tone. Compare the following sentences:

He wanted to be big, but he was only a little man.
He wanted to be deep, but he was only a shallow man.

Exercise

16.3

Complete each sentence that follows with a phrase that contains the appropriate antonym or contrasting word for the one provided in the first part of the sentence.

EXAMPLE: The pond was shallow near the dock, but in the middle it was dangerously deep.

1. There is no comedy in what you say _____.
2. A crooked path meandered through the woods _____.
3. His letter seemed so cruel _____.
4. I can neither discourage you from this venture _____.
5. She saw a double figure of a man _____.
6. The revelers were drunk with joy _____.
7. For a large man he moved gracefully _____.
8. She pronounced her husband guilty _____.
9. Some say that ghosts are imaginary _____.
10. The victory over the enemy was costly _____.

Certain other pairs of contrasting words are even more abstract. Their use generally requires employing more complex sentences. Let's look at some examples:

The fall harvest was usually abundant, but this year the wheat crop was scarce.
He claimed their meeting was accidental, but she knew he had shown up intentionally.
The regiment struggled to advance, but there was only retreat in their fate.
I come not to condemn this man but to praise him.
The nation had been conquered, but the spirit of the people knew no surrender.
Their failed business was no disgrace, but there was likewise no honor in it.
Before the drought the fields were fertile with crops; now they lay barren under the sun.
Where once the people knew harmony there now was only discord.
In the South they know no harsh winters and enjoy a mild climate year-round.
I thought my heart was unbreakable, but I learned the hard way that it was as fragile as crystal.

Exercise

16·4

Complete each sentence that follows with a phrase that contains the appropriate antonym or contrasting word for the one provided in the second part of the sentence.

1. _____, and they could only hope for an abundant crop next year.
2. _____, his use of the word liar was intentional.
3. _____, if you retreat in every debate with the boss?
4. _____, but I also have no praise for her.
5. _____, but it cannot be conquered.
6. _____, the former hero died in disgrace.
7. _____, yet she had become barren in her later years.
8. _____, they only wished to live in harmony with their neighbors.
9. _____, but his angry words were harsh.
10. _____, it is as unbreakable as my will.

Prefixes and suffixes

Some pairs of contrasting words are formed from the use of two common suffixes: -ful and -less. The suffix -ful indicates an abundance of the quality of the adjective to which it is attached. For example:

hateful having an abundance of hate, or full of hate

The suffix -less suggests a lack of the quality of the adjective to which it is attached. For example:

childless having no children, or barren

Not all adjectives can be combined with both suffixes. Review the following list of adjectives, some of which use both suffixes and some of which use only one:

-FUL	-LESS
bashful	—
careful	careless
cheerful	cheerless
—	guiltless
grateful	—
helpful	helpless
hopeful	hopeless
—	lifeless
mindful	mindless
restful	restless
—	senseless
—	shapeless
sinful	sinless
—	speechless
spiteful	—
thankful	thankless
—	timeless
useful	useless
—	winless
wonderful	—

Pairing these words can make for interesting sentences. Let's look at a few examples:

John was neither sinful nor sinless but just an ordinary man.
 She was always mindful of his physical needs yet mindless of his emotions.
 I'm thankful that you helped me with this thankless task.

As noted, some words combine with only one of these two suffixes. Nevertheless, those that combine with both can still be used singly without the need of showing a contrast.

◆ Adjectives with one suffix

Her lifeless body lay on the bed where she had died.
 Old Mr. Cane was a spiteful and bitter man.
 How wonderful to be back in my homeland.

◆ Adjectives that can take both suffixes

The boys have been helpful today.
 The elderly man was in a helpless state and unable to speak.
 This old machinery is hardly useful in a big project like this.
 It's useless for you to try to explain such bad behavior.

Complete each sentence that follows with a phrase that contains the appropriate antonym or contrasting word.

1. Although he was usually careful when handling these chemicals, _____.
2. _____, but his mood was cheerless.
3. I was still hopeful _____.
4. Although I found the room restful, _____.
5. The tearful woman was truly thankful, _____.
6. You have to be mindful of the fact that _____.
7. _____, Martin tried to be helpful.
8. _____, no person is sinless.
9. _____, her attempt to help was useless.
10. Tom made a cheerful noise _____.

Write original sentences with the adjectives provided.

1. bashful _____
2. guiltless _____
3. grateful _____
4. lifeless _____
5. senseless _____
6. shapeless _____
7. speechless _____
8. spiteful _____
9. timeless _____
10. homeless _____

The prefixes un- and mis- can be used to change many adjectives and nouns to a negative or contrasting construction. The prefix un- is synonymous with not, while the prefix mis- says that the action of a verb is performed incorrectly. In some cases, the two prefixes can be used with the same word, but with a different meaning being derived.

NO PREFIX	THE PREFIX UNable	unable	not able, or incapable broken	unbroken	not broken after a mishap
just	unjust	not just or fair
likely	unlikely	not likely, rare
shaken	unshaken	not shaken, still calm

NO PREFIX	THE PREFIX MIS-calculate	miscalculate	calculate or analyze incorrectly handle	mishandle	handle poorly, or bungle represent	misrepresent	represent something as something else
speak	misspeak	make a spoken error
treat	mistreat	treat badly or cruelly

Numerous words sport these prefixes. You can employ them to give your sentences a more formal tone. Consider the following two sentences; they say about the same thing, but the second example sounds more formal:

John figured it out wrong.

John miscalculated.

There are also many words that use both un- and mis- as prefixes. The meanings of such words must be differentiated. Let's look at some examples:

misinformed	informed incorrectly
uninformed	not informed
misarranged	arranged incorrectly unarranged	not arranged
misnamed	named incorrectly
unnamed	not named

Other forms of the prefix un-

The form of the prefix un- can change slightly, depending on the vowel or consonant that follows it, although the meaning of not still pertains. For example, un- becomes in- with some words:

inaccurate	inefficient
inadequate	inexpensive
indivisible	infrequent

Likewise, the prefix changes to im- sometimes. This frequently occurs when the prefix is attached to a word that begins with the letter m. For example:

immature	immodest
immeasurable	immoral
immobile	immortal

Note also that the prefix ig- replaces un- with the adjective ignoble, which means not noble, or lowborn. The same prefix is encountered with a few other words, for which there is no contrasting form in English. Examples include the related words ignore, ignorant, and ignoramus.

The prefix dis-

Another prefix that imparts a contrasting or negative meaning to some words is dis-. Here are some examples:

appear	disappear	no longer appearing, vanish
comfort	discomfort	being uncomfortable content	discontent	lack of contentment, uneasiness honest	dishonest	not honest

Just as with other prefixes, this one cannot be attached to a word at random. Over time, only certain words have combined with dis- to yield a contrasting or negative meaning. Also as with other prefixes, dis- can combine with most kinds of words: nouns, verbs, adjectives, and adverbs. Let's look at some sample sentences that illustrate the use of this prefix:

I'm surprised at just how discourteous the salesman was.
 His disgraceful behavior has landed him in a lot of hot water.
 Their youngest daughter has become rather disobedient.
 The surgical instruments need to be disinfected.

Exercise

16.7

Write original sentences containing each of the words provided. Begin each sentence with a clause that starts with although.

EXAMPLE: mistaken Although Larry was usually right, this time he was mistaken.

1. ignoble _____
2. unnatural _____
3. misunderstand _____
4. unsolved _____
5. misbehave _____

Write original sentences using each of the words and phrases provided.

6. discouraged from _____
7. dissatisfy _____
8. severe disability _____
9. displeasing manner _____
10. discontinue _____

The passive voice and the subjunctive mood

The passive voice is so named because it places the subject of an active-voice sentence—the “doer” of the action—in a passive position in the passive-voice sentence. In some cases, it is even possible to omit the doer of the action completely. English has two forms of passive: one contains a past participle used as a verb, and the other contains a past participle used as an adjective.

The passive voice and past participles

The English active voice consists of a subject, a transitive verb, and a direct or indirect object. If those elements occur, the sentence can be changed to a passive-voice sentence. Sentences that contain intransitive verbs cannot be made passive.

subject + transitive verb + object

John + bought + a new car.

Let’s look first at some examples of active-voice sentences:

- ◆ Sentences with a transitive verb

Jill recommended the movie.
They have never met Mr. Carlson.
Did you already repair the garage door?

- ◆ Sentences with an intransitive verb

We went swimming in Lake Michigan.
My cousin was in Iraq for ten months.
The girls came home around ten P.M.

A passive-voice sentence consists of a subject, a form of to be, a past participle, and an optional prepositional phrase introduced by the preposition by. When an active sentence is changed to passive, the direct or indirect object of the active sentence becomes the subject of the passive sentence. The verb in the active sentence determines the tense of to be in the passive sentence and is formed as a past participle. The active subject is changed to the object of the preposition by in the passive sentence.

subject + to be + past participle

The book + had been + stolen.

Let's now look at an active sentence and how it is changed to the passive voice:

Active	Michael chased the little girl across the playground.
Passive	The little girl was chased across the playground by Michael.

In the active-voice example, the verb is in the past tense—chased. Therefore, in the passive sentence, the verb to be is conjugated in the past tense—was. If the active verb had been chases, the verb is would have been used. If the active verb had been will chase, the verb will be would have been used.

Now let's look at active sentences in other tenses and how they are changed to the passive voice:

Active	Someone is breaking the window.	present progressive
Passive	The window is being broken .	by someone
Active	They have built a moat around the castle.	present perfect
Passive	A moat has been built around the castle.	by them
Active	The angry father will punish the naughty boy.	future
Passive	The naughty boy will be punished .	by the angry father

Exercise

17.1

Using each set of words provided, first write an active sentence in the tense specified in parentheses. Then rewrite the sentence in the passive voice.

1. (past) she / learn / several / new / songs

a. _____
b. _____

2. (present progressive) bartender / pour / two / beer

a. _____
b. _____

3. (present perfect) Andrea / borrow / new / SUV

a. _____
b. _____

4. (future) we / never / catch / huge / fish

a. _____
b. _____

5. (past progressive) Jack / carefully / photograph / scene / of / accident

a. _____
b. _____

6. (present) I / usually / lead / band

a. _____
b. _____

7. (past perfect) farmer / plow / field / by late afternoon

a. _____

b. _____

Why use the passive voice?

The passive voice comes in handy when the writer wishes to emphasize the object of an active sentence: the object becomes the subject of the passive sentence.

The boy almost hurt the little puppy. direct object

The little puppy was almost hurt by the boy. subject

He ripped her dress. direct object

Her dress was ripped by him. subject

It is also used when the writer wishes to omit the doer of the action. This choice can reflect the writer's intention to be evasive or to be tactful by not identifying the doer. For example:

The mayor will fire the entire office staff.

The entire office staff will be fired.

The writer chooses not to identify the mayor as the responsible party.

An angry mob beat the poor man bloody.

The poor man was beaten bloody.

The writer does not name the guilty party.

Another use of the passive voice is for sentences in which no specific doer of the action is involved. This often occurs when the subject of the active sentence is vague: they, people, some people, many, and one, among others.

They grow blueberries in Michigan.

Blueberries are grown in Michigan.

People accused Mr. Thomas of being dishonest.

Mr. Thomas was accused of being dishonest.

Exercise

17·2

Rewrite the following active-voice sentences in the passive voice. Do not include a by phrase in your passive sentences.

1. They grow oranges and lemons in this region of California.

2. Some people have already identified the thief.

3. He is painting her portrait as a surprise for her husband.

4. People will greet him enthusiastically.

5. They repaired and repainted the old car.

6. Despite the inconsistencies, many believed his story.

7. Some have recommended Ms. Lopez for the job.

8. They were examining the evidence in preparation for the trial.

9. Someone has noted his strange behavior in the final report.

10. Did anyone recognize him?

If a writer wishes to conceal his or her source of information, the impersonal it can be used as the subject of a passive phrase that serves to introduce another clause. For example:

It has been reported that the country is in a recession.

It is widely believed that humans evolved from apes.

Exercise

17·3

Using the verbs provided, write original passive sentences with the impersonal it as the subject. Provide an appropriate accompanying clause for each.

EXAMPLE: believe It is believed that nearly a hundred people were injured in the accident.

1. report _____

2. state _____

3. remark _____

4. say _____

5. write _____

6. announce _____

7. estimate _____

8. decide _____

9. mention _____

10. argue _____

Direct and indirect objects

If the active sentence contains both a direct object and an indirect object, the passive formations of that sentence differ and depend on which object is made the subject of the passive sentence. For example:

James gave the poor man five dollars.

the poor man = indirect object;

five dollars = direct object

The poor man was given five dollars by James.

indirect object as subject

Five dollars was given to the poor man by James.

direct object as subject

If the direct object is the subject of the passive sentence, the indirect object requires the use of the preposition to.

Five dollars was given to the poor man by James.

Exercise

17.4

Rewrite the following active sentences in the passive voice twice: first with the direct object used as the passive subject, and then with the indirect object used as the passive subject.

1. The woman sent him a counterfeit check.

a. _____

b. _____

2. I will lend the man a shirt and tie.

a. _____

b. _____

3. Aunt Mary is shipping us a crate of oranges.

a. _____

b. _____

4. Were the judges awarding them a medal?

a. _____

b. _____

5. The broker has shown the young couple two new houses.

a. _____

b. _____

Auxiliaries and the passive

As the passive voice is expressed in the various tenses, the verb to be has to be conjugated appropriately. In the perfect tenses, the auxiliary have is the conjugated verb, and to be is formed as the past participle been.

has/have/had + been + past participle

I have + been + robbed.

Let's look at the passive voice in the various tenses:

Present	She is kissed by Ben. / She is being kissed by Ben.
Past	She was kissed by Ben. / She was being kissed by Ben.
Present perfect	She has been kissed by Ben.
Past perfect	She had been kissed by Ben.
Future	She will be kissed by Ben.

Other auxiliaries often accompany the passive voice as well. When this is the case, it is the auxiliary that is conjugated in a specific tense, and the passive-voice structure is a passive infinitive. The passive infinitive is always to be plus a past participle.

auxiliary + to be + past participle

It must + be + repaired today.

Some commonly used auxiliaries are can, have to, must, want to, ought to, should, and be able to. Let's look at a few sample sentences with some of these auxiliaries in various tenses:

Your suit can be cleaned and pressed by four P.M.	present tense
The meeting will have to be postponed.	future tense
Didn't you want to be chosen for the job?	past tense
Jake will be added to the team by Coach Brown.	future auxiliary

Not all auxiliaries can be used in all the tenses. Can, must, ought to, and should, for example, occur only in the present and past tenses. Their past-tense forms are, respectively, could, must have, ought to have, and should have. The auxiliaries have to, be able to, and want to occur in all the tenses. Let's look at one of these auxiliaries—want to—in the various tenses:

Present	Laura wants to be taken more seriously.
Past	Laura wanted to be taken more seriously.
Present perfect	Laura has wanted to be taken more seriously.
Past perfect	Laura had wanted to be taken more seriously.
Future	Laura will want to be taken more seriously.

It is only the auxiliary that changes in the various tenses. The passive-voice form remains a passive infinitive (to be taken) throughout.

When must have, ought to have, and should have are followed by the passive voice, the passive structure consists of been plus a past participle.

She must have been warned about his temper.

We ought to have been paid a little more money.

You should have been rewarded for such a good deed.

Rewrite the following passive sentences using the auxiliaries provided in parentheses; retain the tense of the original sentence.

EXAMPLE: (can) She was seen by a group of people.
She could be seen by a group of people.

1. (must) Robert is rushed to the hospital.

2. (have to) Someone is held responsible for any act of vandalism.

3. (should) I was not found guilty.

4. (want to) These men will be paid fairly.

5. (can) The other teams aren't instructed by professionals.

6. (must) The roof was struck by lightning.

7. (be able to) No one was rescued.

8. (want to) This student had been admitted to the university.

9. (ought to) The diplomats are greeted by the head of state.

10. (have to) Grandfather has been operated on.

The stative passive

As mentioned earlier, there is a second type of passive. It consists of a conjugation of the verb to be plus a past participle. That, of course, sounds like the previous description of the passive voice. The difference is not so much in the structure as it is in the meaning and usage of the past participle. This second passive, called the stative passive, uses the past participle as an adjective. Consider the following two sentences in the present tense:

The old clock is being repaired.
 The old clock is repaired.

The first sentence conveys an action that is in progress, and the participle repaired is in the passive voice. The second sentence describes the clock as already being in a state of repair. It is adjectival in nature and, therefore, in the stative passive voice.

When the progressive form of the verb is used (is being repaired), the past participle describes the action of a verb; the structure is, therefore, not the stative passive. A prepositional phrase introduced by the preposition by is another indicator that the past participle is not adjectival.

The dish is broken.	stative passive
The dish is broken by Jack.	action in the passive voice
The bread is sliced.	stative passive
The bread is sliced by a special machine.	action in the passive voice

The stative passive tends to occur in the present tense. However, if the intent of the writer is to apply the past participle as an adjective, other tenses can be used. In such constructions, the adjectival meaning may not always be clear. Consider the following past participles used in the stative passive:

Present	This cup is broken.	Its condition is "broken." It requires repair.
Past	This cup was broken.	It used to be broken. It has been glued together.
Present perfect	This cup has been broken for more than a month.	It's been in a broken condition for more than a month.
Past perfect	This cup had been broken but is now whole again.	It used to be broken. It has been glued together.
Future	This cup will be broken.	The prediction is that its condition in the future will be "broken."

If you replace the word broken with a true adjective, such as yellow, the adjectival function of the past participle becomes clear. If yellow can replace a past participle and make sense, then the past participle is being used as an adjective. If it makes no sense, the past participle is a verb in the passive voice. Compare the following sentences:

This cup is broken.	This cup is yellow.
This cup is broken by Tom.	This cup is yellow by Tom.	Makes no sense.
The clock was repaired.	The clock was yellow.
The clock was repaired by her.	The clock was yellow by her.	Makes no sense.
She is being punished.	She is being yellow.	Makes no sense.
She is being punished by Mom.	She is being yellow by Mom.	Makes no sense.

When the verb to be is conjugated in the progressive present tense or progressive past tense, it is clear that the past participle is part of the passive-voice structure. When the progressive conjugation is not used, though, that clarity of meaning is lost, and the sentence could be interpreted as either the passive voice or the stative passive. The addition of a by phrase makes the passive voice meaning clear.

Passive voice/progressive tense	Passive voice or stative passive
The dog is being washed.	The dog is washed.
The field was being cleared.	The field was cleared.

Passive voice/progressive tense + by

The dog is being washed by John.
The field was being cleared by the men.

Passive voice + by

The dog is washed by John.
The field was cleared by the men.

Whether a past participle is being used as part of a passive-voice structure or as an adjective is wholly dependent on the writer's intent, and the reader cannot always guess correctly what the writer has intended. Therefore, when writing, it is preferable to use the active voice so as to be absolutely clear about what is meant.

John is washing the dog.
John washes the dog.

The men were clearing the field.
The men cleared the field.

Exercise

17·6

Using each of the following verbs provided, write two original sentences: one that uses the verb in the passive voice, and then one that uses the verb in the stative passive.

EXAMPLE:

repair

The car is being repaired in the city.

The washing machine is repaired and ready for use.

1. ruin

a. _____

b. _____

2. destroy

a. _____

b. _____

3. paint

The subjunctive mood

The English subjunctive mood has three forms. One is the infinitive of a verb with the omission of the particle word to: (to) go, (to) be, and so on. The second form is the past tense of a verb. In the case of the verb to be, only the plural past tense (were) is used in the subjunctive. The third form uses the auxiliary would followed by an infinitive or by have and a past participle. Let's look at these three forms:

INFINITIVE	FORM 1	FORM 2	FORM 3
to be	be	were	would be/would have been to come	come	came	would come/would have come to go	go	went	would go/would have gone to speak	speak	spoke	would speak/would have spoken

The infinitive form of the subjunctive is used in sentences that convey a suggestion, a request, a recommendation, or a proposal. Note that the conjunction that is optional in such sentences. For example:

I suggest she find another way to get to work. not she finds
Would you recommend that they be allowed to stay here? not they are

The past-tense form of the subjunctive is used to express a wish or a condition and is often combined with a subjunctive clause that includes either would plus an infinitive or would have plus a past participle:

◆ A wish

If only Jack were here with us now.
If you could just try to understand my perspective.
If only he had tried a little harder.

◆ A condition

If the rain let up, we would go out for a long walk.
My son would have been here if he had known that you needed help.
If you were my son, I would give you the same advice.

Notice that a "wish" statement often includes the word only.

In a conditional statement, the if clause sets the condition, and the accompanying clause is the "result" if the condition is met.

condition result

If she were well, she would pay us a visit.

Complete each of the following sentences with any appropriate phrase.

1. I suggest _____.
2. No one recommended she _____.
3. The lawyer requested it _____.
4. The mayor proposed that _____.
5. Would you suggest that the law _____?

Using the following verbs provided, write sentences that express a wish.

1. to find _____
2. to be _____
3. to be able to _____
4. to be seen _____
5. to have driven _____

Using the following pairs of verbs provided, write sentences that express a condition and a result; include a clause that begins with if.

EXAMPLE: to sing / to listen

If she sang in tune, I would listen to her song.

6. to bring / to eat

7. permit / to love to chat

8. have insisted / have not left

9. to have to / to understand

10. to be / to be

Phrasal verbs

•18•

Phrasal verbs are verbs that are combined with other words—prepositions and adverbs—to form a new meaning, often a meaning that is radically different from the meaning of the verb alone. Because there are hundreds of such constructions, this chapter illustrates only a sampling of high-frequency verbs that form commonly used phrasal verbs.

common verb + adverb and/or preposition to hold + up (to rob)

When an adverb, a preposition, or a combination of both is attached to a verb, the conjugation of the verb is not altered. It is the meaning and, therefore, the use of the verb that is changed. Let's look at the common verb to come to see how its meaning changes in a few phrasal verb forms:

to come to

to regain consciousness to come up to

to approach to come up with

to create, or to discover

Compare the use of these three phrasal verbs with a standard verb in the following examples:

When Jane came to, she didn't know where she was.

When Jane regained consciousness, she didn't know where she was.

I came up to the weary horse and patted its nose.

I approached the weary horse and patted its nose.

How did you come up with so much money?

How did you find so much money?

In order to deal with phrasal verbs effectively, a student of English should have a dictionary that specializes in phrasal verbs. This is an important tool for identifying phrasal verbs and for understanding their meanings and uses.

Be

Many phrasal verbs are formed from the verb to be. Let's look at three of them: to be in or out, to be with it, and to be up to something.

The phrasal verb to be in, as noted in Chapter 8, conveys that a person is at home or in the office, while to be out means a person is away from home or away from the office. In addition, to be out can indicate that someone is “out” having fun. For example:

Little Michael is in for the day and taking a nap.
What time will Dr. Schultz be in?

Why were you out so late last night?
My dentist is out for the day.

The second phrasal verb under this heading, to be with it, suggests fashionability or awareness of the latest trends. Used in the negative, it can mean that someone is not up to date or not in touch with pop culture.

Andrea has another new dress. She's always so with it.
Poor Bill still can't dance. He's just not with it.

To be up to something (sometimes to be up to no good) conveys that someone looks suspicious and has some kind of evil intentions.

What's that man doing? I think he's up to something.
I knew you were up to something when I saw you holding a shovel.
Her children are always up to no good.

With this phrasal verb, it is usual to follow the word something with an appropriate adjective; for example: I think he's up to something illegal. When adding an adjective in this manner, it is also possible to change something to anything when the sentence is negated: I don't think they're up to anything wrong.

Break

Among the phrasal verbs that can be formed with the verb to break are to break down and to break up. The use of the words up and down may suggest that these are opposites, but that is not the case.

The phrasal verb to break down has two meanings: (1) to stop working (such as in reference to a mechanical device); and (2) to give in to one's emotions or someone's demands. For example:

How often does this computer break down?
The day had been awful, and she broke down and cried.
We questioned the thief for hours, and he finally broke down and confessed.

The phrasal verb to break up carries the sense of causing someone to laugh aloud. It suggests that the actions or words in question were so funny that the person could not control his or her amusement.

Maria's joke broke everyone up.
The clown's silly antics always broke the audience up.

The same construction has a radically different meaning and use when followed by the preposition with. It means that one person is ending a romantic relationship with another person: to break up with someone.

After five months of dating, she knew she had to break up with Tom.
He no longer loved her. It was time to break up.

Breeze

The phrase to breeze through refers to the ability to carry out a task with ease or dispatch.

Don breezed through his workday and set off for his date with Tina.
No one ever breezes through Professor Chang's exams.

Count

Do not confuse the usage to count (on)—that is, in the sense of to calculate by using one's fingers—with the phrasal verb to count on, which means to rely on. The preposition upon sometimes replaces on in the phrasal meaning.

The little boy counted on his fingers.
I know I can count on you for your support.
You shouldn't have counted on Jim to give you any help in moving.

Exercise

18.1

Using each phrasal verb provided, write two original sentences.

EXAMPLE:

to be in

Mr. Cane won't be in until after two P.M.

I have to stay in this evening and do some studying.

1. to be out

- a. _____
- b. _____

2. to be with it

- a. _____
- b. _____

3. to be up to something/no good

- a. _____
- b. _____

4. to break down

- a. _____
- b. _____

5. to break up (with)

- a. _____
- b. _____

6. to breeze through

- a. _____
- b. _____

7. to count on

a. _____

b. _____

Cut

The verb cut can be combined with the preposition out: to cut (something) out. Meanings of this phrasal verb include (1) to stop doing something; (2) to eliminate or cast out someone or something; and (3) to clip out or excise a shape from something. Here are some examples:

Cut that out! You're being too noisy!

Why cut me out? I spent as much time on the project as anyone.

Maria cut out a cartoon from the newspaper.

I'll cut a recipe out of the magazine.

This kind of phrasal verb is special in that the object of the verb can either precede or follow the preposition out if that object is a noun. Pronouns can only precede the preposition. Don't forget that prepositions in phrasal verbs can serve as adverbs:

noun direct object + preposition

I cut an interesting article + out for you.

preposition + noun direct object

I cut out + an interesting article for you.

pronoun direct object + preposition

I cut it + out for you.

This flexibility occurs with many phrasal verbs—but not with all. This characteristic is identified in reference to other phrasal verbs in the remainder of this chapter as the “flexible position” of a preposition. Be aware that many of these prepositions are not functioning as prepositions in these sentences; they are functioning as adverbs. In the phrasal verb to call (someone) up—meaning either to phone someone or to conscript someone for military service—up is used as an adverb. Consider the following sentence:

They called up my brother to serve two years in the army.

In this sentence, the words up my brother do not constitute a prepositional phrase. Instead, up modifies the verb call, and my brother is a direct object.

Drop

When to drop is combined with in, the new phrasal verb means to stop at someone's home for a short visit. To specify what person is being visited, the preposition on is added. Here are some examples:

My parents dropped in last night around eight.

When you're in town, please drop in on us.

I never drop in on Michael unexpectedly.

End

When up is added to the verb to end, the phrase takes on either of two distinct meanings: (1) to reach completion or termination; or (2) when the preposition with is added, to find oneself in the company of someone or in possession of something—usually a result that is unwanted or unpleasant. Let's look at some examples:

These meetings won't end up until tomorrow after two P.M.
Professor Hill ended the lecture up with a few words of advice.
After her date with Jim, Maria ended up with a bad cold.
I wanted to dance with Martin! How did I end up with Michael?

Sometimes to end up with is stated as to wind up with. They mean the same thing:

He ended up with no money at all. He wound up with no money at all.

The preposition in this phrasal verb has a flexible position around the object:

She ended up the discussion with a little joke.
She ended the discussion up with a little joke.
She ended it up with a little joke.

Follow

When to follow is combined with up, and sometimes on, the phrasal verb means to examine something that has been done, or to evaluate how someone has performed. Some examples:

I'll follow up on Maria's progress with a report.
The detective decided to follow up the new clue.
The reporter was following up on the strange story.

When the preposition up is used without on in this phrasal verb, up has a flexible position around the object:

We should follow that report up.
We should follow up that report.
We should follow it up.

Fool

The verb to fool is synonymous with to deceive. However, when around is attached to the verb, new meanings emerge: (1) it means to hang about idly; (2) when the preposition with is added, it means to do something wasteful or useless; and (3) when used with the preposition on instead, it means to be unfaithful. Here are some examples:

There was nothing else to do, so we just fooled around in the park.
Why are you fooling around with that old radio?
If you're fooling around on me, I want you to tell me now.

Get

Several phrasal verbs are formed with the verb to get. Two that are worth discussion are to get away (with) and to get at.

When to get away is used alone, it means to escape, or to move away from a location. The addition of the preposition with changes the meaning: the new phrase means to carry out an evil act without punishment. Look at these examples:

The prisoner dug a tunnel from his cell and tried to get away.
Get away from the window. It's drafty there.
He thought he got away with his crime, but he was arrested last week.

Get at has three meanings: (1) to put one's hands on or attack someone; (2) to hint at something; and (3) to begin discussing something. Some examples:

The bully was trying to get at me, but my friends held him back.
I don't understand. What are you getting at?
It's time we finally get at the heart of the matter and solve this problem.

Exercise

18·2

Complete each sentence that follows with any appropriate phrase or clause that incorporates a phrasal verb.

1. Jonathan knew he could count _____.
2. Our new neighbors like to drop _____.
3. I think it's about time to end _____.
4. I hope you can follow _____ up.
5. We learned that Helen had fooled around _____.
6. The youngsters are in the backyard fooling _____.
7. The three prisoners got _____.
8. Let's get at _____ before it gets too late.
9. She wanted a prom dress but ended up _____.
10. I don't understand. What are you getting _____?

Have

Have is another high-frequency verb that can form numerous phrasal verbs. One that bears analysis is the phrase to have something against. This combination of words means to harbor an attitude of disrespect or dislike. Some examples:

What do you have against me? I never did anything to you.
Anna had something against Bob and let him know it.
I have nothing against apple pie. I just don't want any.

Notice that with the third example, something changes to nothing in the negative. When this phrase is negated with not, the word anything is used: I don't have anything against apple pie.

Lay

The phrasal verb to lay off (of) has two meanings: (1) often followed by the preposition of, it means to stop bothering or harassing someone; (2) used without of, it means to end a person's employment. The latter meaning is sometimes accompanied by the preposition from. The following examples illustrate the variants:

Lay off (of) me! You have no right talking to me like that!
Tom just won't lay off (of) the man who scratched his new car.
Business was bad, and the boss had to lay the men off (from their jobs).

The preposition off in this phrasal verb has a flexible position around the object:

Mr. Jones laid the whole staff off.
Mr. Jones laid off the whole staff.
Mr. Jones laid everyone off.

Lead

When the verb to lead is followed by the preposition on, the phrase has the normal meaning of to continue to lead, but when a direct object is included, its meaning becomes to tantalize someone—often with the idea of love or romance. These examples shed further light:

Lead on, sir. These men will follow you anywhere.
Are you just leading me on? I can't believe your story is true.
The woman was leading Bill on. She just wanted his money.

The preposition on in this phrasal verb has a flexible position around the object:

Why are you leading on that nice young man?
Why are you leading that nice young man on?
Why are you leading him on?

Let

Combining the verb let with the preposition down yields a phrasal verb that means to disappoint someone. It can also have the meaning of to ease up in an activity. Consider these examples:

Don't let me down. Please lend me the money.
John knew he was letting her down when he couldn't help her move.
Don't let down now. You've got only a mile left to go in the marathon.

The preposition down in this phrasal verb has a flexible position around the object:

We can't let down Uncle Bill.
We can't let Uncle Bill down.
We can't let him down.

When the verb let is followed by on, the phrase means to be obvious, or to provide knowledge or information. Add the preposition about to cite the topic of the information. To cite the recipient of the information, add the preposition to. Here are some examples:

Don't let on that you know me.
You mustn't let on to Robert about the accident we had.
She didn't let on to me about it, but I guessed the truth.

Make

The verb to make has a variety of uses and can form many phrasal verbs. Here, just a salient few are considered.

To make of has three primary meanings: (1) to interpret someone or something; (2) to make a success of oneself; and (3) in the construction to make something of it, to invite someone to fight. Here are examples:

I don't know what to make of this note from Karen. What does it mean?
John has made something of himself and has become rich in the process.
Yes, I took your books! Do you want to make something of it?

Followed by the preposition up, the verb to make produces a few new meanings: (1) to fabricate or lie; (2) to apply cosmetics; (3) often with the pronoun it and using the preposition to, to compensate a person for something; and (4) accompanied by the preposition with, to reconcile.

I confess. I made the whole story up.
Two women were making the bride up for her wedding.
Tom promised to make it up to me, but nothing ever happened.
Robert made up with Carmen, but she was still angry.

The preposition up in this phrasal verb has a flexible position around the object:

John made up another excuse.
John made another excuse up.
John made it up.

If you use the preposition for with to make up, the phrasal verb means to compensate for something that was done.

I hope this check will make up for the problem you had with our product.
You can't make up for such bad behavior.

When to make up is used with the object the bed, the reference is to putting fresh sheets and coverings on a mattress. With that meaning, the preposition up again has a flexible position around the object:

Let's make up the bed.
Let's make the bed up.
Let's make it up.

Exercise

18.3

Fill in each blank in the following sentences with the appropriate form of the missing phrasal verb. Use the definition provided in parentheses to choose each verb.

EXAMPLE: The police officer came up to me and asked for my identification.

1. They're going _____ the entire advertising department. (end employment)
2. I hope my sister doesn't _____ that I got in at two A.M. (be obvious, provide information)
3. I can't understand why Phillip _____ you. (harbor an attitude of disrespect)
4. My boss just doesn't know what _____ this report. (interpret)
5. Although he's still angry, I finally _____ my ex-boyfriend. (become friends again)

6. Little Billy _____ a silly story about why he was late again. (fabricate)
7. All your apologies cannot _____ for the way you treated me. (compensate)
8. He can't restrain himself from _____ having bought a new house. (be obvious)
9. I wish that horrid man would just _____ me. (stop bothering)
10. I think it was cruel of you to _____ Jake _____. (tantalize with the idea of love)

Pass

When the verb pass is followed by away, a new meaning is produced: to die. This expression is often used in place of to die in order to blunt the reality and impart a tone of compassion. When the verb pass is followed by the phrase off as, the meaning of the phrasal verb is to represent that someone or something is different from what it really is. Some examples:

Old Mrs. Jarvis passed away last night.
 The man tried to pass the pretty girl off as his daughter.
 The crooked dealer thought he could pass off an old chair as an antique.

The preposition off in this phrasal verb has a flexible position around the object:

He passed off a forgery as the real thing.
 He passed a forgery off as the real thing.
 He passed it off as the real thing.

Set

With the addition of the preposition back, the verb to set has three new meanings: (1) followed by the preposition from, to move something away from other things; (2) to change the time on the clock to an earlier time; and (3) to cause a temporary failure or delay.

I set the stack of books back from my work space. I needed more room to write.
 Tomorrow we have to set all the clocks back an hour.
 The broken equipment set us back a whole week in completing the job.

When to set is followed by off, it has four primary new meanings: (1) to anger someone; (2) to cause something to explode or go off; (3) followed by the preposition on, to depart for a journey; and (4) followed by the preposition for, to depart for a specific destination. Some examples:

Jim's cruel remark really set Anna off. She began to scream at him.
 The bomb was set off by a remote detonator.
 The next morning we set off on the short trip to Sun Valley.
 After breakfast the tourists set off for Las Vegas.

The preposition off in this phrasal verb has a flexible position around the object:

That set off my boss .	Who set off the alarm ?
That set my boss off .	Who set the alarm off ?
That set him off .	Who set it off ?

Stand

When to stand is combined with for, the phrasal verb has two meanings: (1) to symbolize something; and (2) to tolerate something. Look at these examples:

The American flag stands for freedom and democracy.
I won't stand for your rude behavior any longer.

Take

When to take is combined with back, it has three meanings: (1) to return something; (2) to trigger a memory of something; and (3) to retract something.

I took the tools I borrowed back to Jim.
Hearing that song takes me back to when I was still in college.
Take that back! You know that's not true!

The adverb back in this phrasal verb has a flexible position around the object:

Mark won't take back the money.
Mark won't take the money back.
Mark won't take it back.

Another phrasal verb is formed with to take and the preposition up. It has four primary meanings: (1) to raise the hem of a garment; (2) sometimes using the preposition with, to discuss a subject; (3) to be involved in an activity; and (4) followed by the preposition on, to agree to a proposal. Here are examples of each:

That dress is too long. Take it up a couple inches.
The committee took up the problem of recycling plastics.
I need to take up the question of Jim's employment with you.
My daughter has taken up stamp collecting.
I'd like to take them up on their offer to buy my house.

The preposition up in this phrasal verb has a flexible position around the object:

My cousin took up the piano.
My cousin took the piano up.
My cousin took it up.

Walk

The verb to walk when followed by out means to leave, or to exit. When the preposition on is added, the meaning is altered: to abandon something, or to jilt someone.

Why did you walk out on the last act of the play?
I don't understand why she walked out on Jim. Does she have a new boyfriend?

Warm

When to warm is followed by up, it means to make something warm by placing it over a heat source, or that something is becoming warm. When the preposition to is added to this phrase, a different meaning results: to become comfortable with a person or situation.

It will start warming up around the middle of April.
As soon as I met Jake, I warmed up to him right away.
At first I thought the idea was silly, but I soon warmed up to it.

Water

When you add down to the verb to water, the phrase conveys that a liquid is being diluted, or that someone's efforts are being reduced in effectiveness.

The bartender watered down the whiskey to reap a few more dollars.
If you water down that solution any further, it won't clean anything.
Congress hoped to water down a strict old law.
The committee watered down the chairman's powers.

Exercise

18.4

Write an original sentence using each of the phrasal verbs provided.

1. to pass off as _____
2. to set off _____
3. to set off for _____
4. to stand for _____
5. to take back _____
6. to take up _____
7. to walk out _____
8. to walk out on _____
9. to warm up to _____
10. to water down _____

Other parts of speech

If a phrasal verb is transitive, it can be used to form the passive voice. The verb in the phrasal verb is formed as a past participle and is introduced by the auxiliary to be. For example:

The two brothers were cut out of the will.
The stew still has to be warmed up.

Many phrasal verbs can be used as nouns. In some cases, they are combined as one word by means of a hyphen and in other instances they are written as one word.

The children played on the floor with the cutouts.
After a hard winter, we're hoping for a quick warm-up.

In addition, nouns and past participles formed from phrasal verbs can act as adjectives:

◆ Nouns as adjectives

The getaway car was a black SUV.
We'll present a follow-up report tomorrow.

◆ Participles as adjectives

The laid-off workers began to plan a protest.
I can't eat watered-down soup.

Exercise

18.5

Write three versions of an original sentence for each phrasal verb provided, showing the "flexible position" of the preposition with a noun and, in your third version, with a pronoun.

EXAMPLE:

to break up

His jokes always broke up his friends.

His jokes always broke his friends up.

His jokes always broke them up.

1. to break down

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

2. to follow up

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

3. to lay off

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

4. to lead on

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

5. to let down

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

6. to pass off

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

7. to set off

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

8. to warm up

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

9. to water down

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

10. to make up

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

10. He knows all the hottest clubs. He's really _____ it.

Letter writing and e-mail

Although the modern world offers many advanced forms of communication, from feature-laden telephones to the Internet, people still need writing skills that can be employed in the various channels. This chapter concentrates on the formats needed for writing letters and for composing e-mails.

Letter writing

The two basic forms of letters are the informal or friendly letter and the formal or business letter. Let's first look at how these two types of letter writing affect the composition of the envelope.

For both types, the addressee's name appears in the center of the envelope, and the sender's name appears in the upper left corner. On the line below each name is the street address and then the suite or apartment number (if any). The next line contains the city, the two-letter state abbreviation, and the zip code along with the four-number extension (if known). A general rule is to spell out all words in an address other than an addressee's title. However, apartment and boulevard can be abbreviated (Apt. / Blvd.). Compass points that are included with an address do not require periods in their abbreviations (NW, NE, SW, and SE): 31 Jones Avenue NW. If the address is typed and has fewer than four lines, it is generally double-spaced. Otherwise, the address is single-spaced. If the addressee is a close friend or associate of the writer, the person's courtesy title (Mr., Ms., Mrs.) or professional title (e.g., Dr.) is sometimes omitted.

If the letter is written to someone out of the country, the country name is added on a separate line. For example:

Sender of a casual letter

John Jones
1825 North Campbell Road
Schaumburg, IL 60019-3445
USA

Addressee

Ms. Barbara Gordon
9 Avon Crescent
Kenilworth CV7 3PQ
United Kingdom

A business-size envelope is approximately four inches by ten inches and is used for formal letters but is acceptable for use with informal letters as well. Most businesses have business envelopes with the name and address of the company preprinted in the sender's position in the upper left-hand corner or, on occasion, on the flap. In addition, sometimes the name and functional title (e.g., Director of Marketing) of the sender appears above the company name. Compare these examples:

Sender of a business letter

Michael Hughes, Manager
The Mills Company
1800 East Main Street
Cutler, AL 35044-2365

Addressee

A to Z Contractors
11 Dryden Road NW
Kalamazoo, MI 49016

Exercise

19.1

Combine the elements in each set of entries as they should appear in the address of an informal letter.

EXAMPLE: Illinois / Geneva / Mary Jones / 60691-4404 / 1930 Gordon Drive
Ms. Mary Jones
1930 Gordon Drive
Geneva, IL 60691-4404

1. Dallas / Henry Higgins / 1556 West Palmer Street / Texas / 75211 / Apt. 3

2. Arizona / Tucson / 32 Fifth Street / 85701 / Margaret Rutherford

3. Third Floor / Massachusetts / Ben Roberts / 3103 North Scott Street / Boston / 02197

Parts of the casual letter

There are not strict rules as to what parts must be included in a casual or friendly letter. In general, the letter consists of the date, the sender's address, the salutation, the body of the letter, the closing, and the signature of the sender. If the recipient is a close friend or associate of the sender and is aware of the sender's address (which appears on the envelope), it is common to omit the sender's address here.

The various parts of this kind of letter, except for the body itself, can be adjusted left or right. Likewise, paragraph indentation is optional in a friendly letter. Consider the following example:

March 10, 2009 (date)

1415 North Broadway Street (optional sender's address)
Baltimore, MD 21212

Dear Mary, (salutation)

It was great to see you again last week. I really enjoyed your sister's party and had a lot of fun talking with you about old times. I guess we both miss college life. The studying, exams, and occasional boring professor were often a burden, but the great people we met and the recreational activities on campus made all the difference. You helped to make my years in college special. I'm glad we got together again at the party. I hope to see more of you.

Yours truly, (closing)

[Signature]

An alternative approach is to place the date and the optional sender's address at the upper right of the page.

Note that a comma follows both the salutation and the closing in a casual letter.

The closing of a friendly letter can take various forms, the choice of which depends in part on the nature of the relationship between the writer and addressee. Here are some frequently used closings:

Casual

Truly,
Truly yours,
Sincerely,
Sincerely yours,

Very friendly

Fondly,
Affectionately,
With love,
With all my love,

Exercise

19·2

Write a casual letter to a close friend named Mary Smith (or another name of your choosing) to tell her of your new job and to invite her to a party.

Parts of the business letter

It is customary to adhere to certain rules when composing a business letter. That said, there is a contemporary tendency to relax those strictures, particularly when a businessperson is communicating regularly with another businessperson and wishes to make the relationship less structured and more cordial.

Let's take the prudent course here and walk through the rules as they are normally followed:

- ◆ A business letter should be typed and composed in the Times New Roman font, twelve point.
- ◆ The date is the first element of the business letter and is either justified left or centered on the page. In American style, the month is written out and is followed by the date, which is separated from the year by a comma: March 10, 2009.
- ◆ If preprinted letterhead is not being used, the sender's address follows after a skipped line below the date and is justified left on the page. The sender's name should not be included in this part of the letter, since it appears at the bottom. (In a less used style, the sender's address appears below the signature at the end of the letter.)
- ◆ After another skipped line below the sender's address, the recipient's name and address are entered; these lines are also justified left. The first line here is the recipient's name, which is preceded by a courtesy or professional title and is followed by the person's functional title when applicable. On the lines below are, in order, the department (if any); the company name; the street address; and the city, state, and zip code. If you are writing to someone in a foreign country, the country name is the last element of this address and should be typed in capital letters. For example:

Ms. Joanne Keller
Legal Department
Shuster and Kane, Inc.
1600 West Schiller Avenue
Milwaukee, WI 53201

Dr. Martin Braun
Werner-Versand KG
18 Marktplatz
86123 Augsburg
GERMANY

- ◆ Another line is skipped before the salutation. The salutation should usually include the same courtesy or professional title as in the address line and is followed by a colon. In a friendlier style, only the first name is used, but it is still followed by a colon (rather than a comma as with informal letters). For example:

Dear Ms. Keller:

Dear Dr. Braun:

Dear Joanne:

Again, a line is skipped between the salutation and the body of the letter. The body should be single-spaced like the other parts of the letter, except that a line is skipped between paragraphs when the text is justified left. Paragraph indentation is optional and is sometimes used when the date, closing, and signature lines are centered on the page. The three commonly used formats for a business letter are block, modified block, and indented modified block. Here are examples of each:

Block format

Date
Sender's address
Recipient's address
Salutation
Body of letter
Closing
Signature
Enclosure

Modified block format

Date
Sender's address
Recipient's address
Salutation
Body of letter
Closing
Signature
Enclosure

Indented modified block

Date
Sender's address
Recipient's address
Salutation
Body of letter
Closing
Signature
Enclosure

Note that if the writer is enclosing any documents in the business letter, it is customary to type the word Enclosure(s) one line below the signature line.

- ◆ Frequently, the writer of a business letter informs the recipient of the topic of the letter by adding a brief statement before the salutation. That statement follows the abbreviation Re: (regarding). A line is skipped before and after the statement. Here is an example of this structure:

Mr. Thomas Hanson, Vice President
Adams, Inc.
12 Victory Lane
Chicago, IL 60699

Re: Recent Software Problems

Dear Mr. Hanson:

I appreciate your quick response to my earlier problems with your firm's accounting software. The downloads you provided solved my problems. However, that solution was only temporary.

At the present time, the input of all forms of data is working correctly. However, now the simplest equations that require either addition or subtraction are providing completely inaccurate totals.

I need this software to be working properly and in the very near future. Please send a technician to my office to end this predicament.

- ◆ When a letter is written to no specific person at a company, the salutation is usually Dear Sir or Madam: or To whom it may concern:. These phrases are also helpful when the gender of the addressee is not clear. For instance, is Chris Jones a man or a woman? Is A. J. Barrons a man or a woman? It is considered good form to obtain the name of the appropriate person in the company to whom the letter should be directed (and to clarify the gender, as well as the correct spelling, if necessary), whenever possible, and to use that person's name in the salutation. The two vague salutations cited in this section should be used only when that is impossible.
- ◆ The closing of a business letter is traditionally a simple, respectful phrase such as the following:

Sincerely, Regards, Best regards,
- ◆ Then four lines are skipped as a space for the signature. Below the signature is the writer's name typed out.

Combine the elements in each set that follows as they should appear in the address and salutation of a business letter.

1. The Stone Company / Denver, CO / Alice French / 3103 Scott Street / Design Department / 80211 / Chief Accountant / A Proposal for the Jenner Project

2. Manager / 1515 South Wellington Avenue / Charles Gibbs / Atlanta, GA / Kaufman Brothers Shoes / 30303

Write a business letter to the address provided, requesting information regarding resorts in Florida and cruises in the Caribbean. Include personal information: number of travelers, range of cost, age level, preferred dates of travel, required facilities, and so on.

Mr. Victor Wallace
Sunnyside Travel Agency
909 E. Culver Avenue
St. Petersburg, FL 33705

E-mails

Messages and letters sent by electronic mail should follow the format of a friendly letter for recipients who are close to the writer and should follow the format of a business letter for those who are on a more formal basis. E-mail format automatically provides the date and the e-mail address of the sender, but the sender must type in the recipient's e-mail address in the line marked To. In the line marked CC, the sender types in the e-mail address(es) of anyone who should receive a copy of the message. Also, in the line marked BCC, the sender types in the e-mail address(es) of anyone who will receive a blind copy of the message. A blind copy means that the recipient's e-mail address will not appear in the transmission.

E-mail accounts have a function allowing the writer to store a list of e-mail addresses. When an address is needed, the writer clicks on the option Insert Address, or similar nomenclature, to access the list and to select the e-mail address(es) to be placed automatically in the To line.

In the Subject or Re field, the writer enters a phrase that summarizes the intent of the message; for example: Mom feels better or Proposal for Teardown on State Street.

E-mail formats allow the sender to access files stored on a computer and transmit them along with the main message as an Attachment. An attachment can be a single file or a series of files.

Most e-mail messages can be written in a variety of fonts and colors, which can be chosen from a list provided as a feature of the e-mail program. In a business e-mail, it is wise to avoid unusual fonts and elaborate changes of color or size. New Times Roman in black is always correct.

Sample e-mail

To: Jane Michaels (janem@datafirm.net)

From: William Ort (billort@datafirm.net)

Subject: Friday night

Hi, Jane.

They're going to show the Bulls game at Harold's Tap on Friday. It should be a wild game. Can you join me? I'll be there with Mary and Steve. Is 7 P.M. good for you? Hope to see you there. Let me know for sure. Thanks.

Bill

The salutation, body, and closing of an e-mail should, in most cases, resemble those elements as they appear in a friendly or business letter. In friendly and casual messages, there is a tendency to abbreviate words when possible and to make the content brief. There also is a great deal of license taken with salutations. Naturally, Dear Bill is an appropriate salutation, but you will also encounter Hi, Bill or just Bill. In many cases, the salutation is simply avoided.

Something similar occurs with the closing of a casual e-mail. Sincerely is always appropriate, but you will also see So long or Bye for now or Later, among other expressions. In fact, a closing might be omitted and the e-mail ended with the name of the sender. And even the sender's name can be omitted.

Except in business e-mails, there is often an attempt to incorporate the jargon used in chat rooms, apparently in an effort to be contemporary and casual (LOL or laugh out loud, for example). Employing this trend in e-mails is the option of the writer. However, an e-mail writer cannot go wrong by conforming to the rules described for friendly and business letters.

Exercise

19.5

Write an e-mail to a friend, requesting the return of a personal item and including an invitation to join you at an event.

Exercise

19·6

Write an e-mail to the manager of a company at which you have applied for a job to learn about the status of your application.

Exercise

19·7

Write an e-mail to the company that painted your house or apartment, citing a complaint with the job and specifying a course of action to remedy the situation.

Let's write!

You have now completed a series of exercises that have given you practice in writing sentences of various types and containing all the essential structures of the English language. That means that you are ready to be more creative.

The following writing exercises will permit you to apply what you know about sentence writing in two formats: original sentences that require the use of specified grammatical and vocabulary elements and original sentences that require a specific content. In both cases, challenge yourself to create interesting and intelligent sentences. Do not write below your level of skill.

Specified grammatical elements

When a grammatical element is specified for use in a sentence, the nature of that sentence is dependent upon the grammatical element. For example, specifying the future tense determines when in time an action will take place. Specifying antonyms suggests that a comparison will be made in a sentence.

Exercise

20.1

Using each set of words and phrases provided, write an original sentence that conforms to the grammar cues in parentheses. Add as many words as necessary.

EXAMPLE: (past perfect tense) he / forget / umbrella / because / mother / sick / hospital

He had forgotten his umbrella, because he had been worried about his sick mother in the hospital.

1. (present perfect tense) girlfriend / wait / gift / birthday

2. (passive voice) customs official / fire / drunk / late

3. (past tense) when / in Washington, D.C. / interview / representative / Colorado

4. (present tense) whenever / abroad / try / language / country

5. (interrogative who) say / defendant / guilty / fine

6. (conjunction although) Germany / locate / near/ Denmark / Scandinavian country

7. (antonym) former wife / beautiful / new girlfriend

8. (passive voice) week ago / barn / burn down / lightning

9. (future tense) weak / infant / struggle / health / born / infection

10. (present perfect tense) behave / as if / first prize

Exercise

20·2

Complete the following sentences with any appropriate phrase. Include the cue word or phrase provided in parentheses in your sentence in any appropriate form.

1. The newsman reported that _____. (peace treaty)

2. We got our tickets _____. (wait for)

3. Why are you talking about _____? (and not)

4. Tina dialed the number, _____. (hang up)

5. What do you have against _____? (save money)

6. I undress, take a quick shower, _____. (as fast as)

7. Oh, _____. (costume)

8. _____ although we had a terrible argument. (each other)

9. Whose fault _____? (she had an accident)

10. In 1455 Gutenberg _____. (invention)

Fill in the blanks with appropriate phrases to form complete sentences; use the tense provided in parentheses.

EXAMPLE: (past) Your daughter was diligent, but your son was quite lazy.

1. (present) _____ just as expensive as _____ .
2. (past) _____ much sharper _____ .
3. (future) _____ jump farther _____ .
4. (present) _____ not valuable but _____ .
5. (present perfect) Either _____ or _____ .
6. (present) _____ the shortest route _____ ?
7. (past) _____ one of the least likely _____ .
8. (present) Here, _____ .
9. (present perfect) _____ finished, or _____ ?
10. (present) I myself _____ rather than _____ .

Specific content

Now it's time to write completely original sentences without conforming to a paradigm or in response to cues. The only suggestions you need to follow are the topics provided for your writing. Be sure to challenge yourself. Do not take the easy road, because having come this far in this book, you're ready for some real writing.

Write a paragraph that describes the home in which you live. You can cite such aspects as its size, the rooms, the furniture, your family, decorations, activities, and even holidays you celebrate.

Exercise

20·5

Write a paragraph that describes the schools you attended, favorite teachers and subjects, friends you made, activities in which you participated, degrees you have earned, and how you hope to apply your education to your career.

Exercise

20·6

Write a paragraph that describes the plot of a book or the content of an article that you have recently read.

- Dear Mary,
- It was good to see you again last week. I'm glad to hear that your mother is well again and able to go back to work. I'm happy to say that I'm back at work, too. I found a job in Peoria teaching eighth-grade math in Mather Junior High School. I'm so happy about this position, and I can hardly wait for the kids to show up next week. It's been a lot preparation, but I'm enjoying everything.
- Gayle and I are having a housewarming party on Labor Day. We hope you can come to Peoria and help us celebrate. We've got the guest room ready for your visit.
- We're eager to see you again.
- Fondly,
- Mark

Re: Travel to Florida

Dear Mr. Wallace:

I received your brochures last week and am interested in a little more information regarding a ten-day vacation in one of two Florida resorts: Sunny Sands in Sanibel and Beacon House on Key Largo. My preferred arrival dates are either Saturday, September 12, or Saturday, September 19.

We are a family of five. Our three children range in age from four to eleven years, and we worry that the resorts that interest us are oriented only to adults. Are there activities for young children? Are there babysitting services? Naturally, the cost for a vacation like this is a concern. Your brochure did not specify how many guests can stay in one room. If our children can be in a single room with us, that would make this vacation more affordable.

Do some of the rooms provide kitchenettes? Does the resort have a laundry for guests? Are there tennis courts and a gym?

If a Florida resort vacation will cost too much, I would consider taking my family on a Caribbean cruise during the same time frame in September. Please send me information on such cruises only if the cost of the Florida resort is more than $190.00 per night for our family of five.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

Henry Smythe

Mike,

I lent you my surfboard more than a month ago, and you still haven't returned it. I know you've been back from Hawaii for more than a week and can't be using it here in Minneapolis's snow. Just kidding. But I need it by next week. My brother wants to use it.

Don't forget about the party at Laura's house on Saturday. Are you bringing a date? I asked Kim to go with me, but she said she has other plans. Know another girl who needs a date?

See you soon.

Jim

Subject: My application

Dear Ms. King:

I enjoyed our conversation over the phone on May 2. I was very pleased to receive your invitation to send you my application for employment with Datafirm and my résumé. I feel certain that you must have received them well over a week ago, and I am eager to learn what you think. Since last speaking with you, I have completed my course on the Italian renaissance and received a grade of A. That means that my course work is now ended, and I shall receive my degree in June, which would be just in time to start with Datafirm. Looking forward to your reply.

Sincerely,

Marie S. McDonald

Dear Sir or Madam:

On October 5 of this year, I signed a contract with your company to paint my living room and dining room. The work began two weeks late and took five days instead of two. However, it is not the time the job took but the quality of the work that I am contacting you about. The two coats of paint I contracted for turned out to be just one coat, and the old paint is showing through.

I'd like someone to come out to complete the job to my satisfaction, or I will feel compelled not to send you my final payment as shown in Invoice #5544. Please contact me immediately to resolve this problem. Thank you.
